

Nervous

People often wonder why their nerves are so weak; why they get tired so easily; why they start at every slight sound; why they do not sleep naturally; why they have frequent headache, indigestion and nervous

Dyspepsia

The explanation is simple. It is found in that impure blood which is continually feeding the nerves upon refuse instead of the elements of strength and vigor. In such condition opiate and nerve compounds simply deaden and do not cure. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures the nervous pure, rich, red blood; gives natural sleep, perfect digestion, is the true remedy for all nervous troubles.

MARATHON'S IMPORTANCE

The Battle Decided the Course of Civilization.

Sir Edward Creasy declares that on the issue of the battle of Marathon depended "the whole future progress of human civilization." In the handful of years that followed the battle, the Greeks had developed faculties which indicated that man had advanced another stage toward the highest ideal. Foremost among these faculties was the intellectual faculty. Athens, then, contained the germs of human freedom; it was the forerunner of the democracy of the world. But the very existence of Athens and Greece was threatened by the huge barbaric empire of Persia. Darius had sent out his legions of warriors to add the Greek states to his vast dominions. Faced by his numerous forces met the Athenians on the plains of Marathon. Hitherto invincible in the field, the Persians looked upon the little army opposed to them with contempt. The Greeks themselves hesitated to hazard a battle with the conquerors of the world. Their generals debated the question, and the decision to fight was made by the vote of the majority. Persians were content to wait the leisure of the immortal Mithras. He led his ten thousand Greeks against the Persian host, and gained a decisive victory. The glorious day of Marathon beat back the advancing tide of eastern despotism and barbarism, and saved the freedom and civilization of the Western world.

Feathers and Music.

The sailor has his musical shanty to the captain until the anchor is hoisted to the peak, the farmer trills a lay to lighten his labors as he pitches lay to the wagon, and those songs are familiar to many, but whoever heard or saw a girl singing a ditty to the time of the music? asks the San Francisco Chronicle.

Such a scene can be witnessed any Friday evening at the Clay Street market, where the old-fashioned chicken pickers and the old-fashioned fowls to the time of the music? asks the San Francisco Chronicle.

The men seat themselves in a half-circle, and the fowls are picked. The men seat themselves in a half-circle, and the fowls are picked. The men seat themselves in a half-circle, and the fowls are picked.

Feathers fly in all directions, but the song is not the last pin-feather. The men seat themselves in a half-circle, and the fowls are picked.

MISERY IN A MANSION

Strangled Husband and Wife Living Miserably.

On one of the north side avenues stands a fine old-fashioned mansion, says the Chicago Chronicle. It is as old as a north side house can possibly be, for two centuries it has stood in the same place. The house is a double one, three stories in height and has many cheerful white lace curtains windows. To the pleasure of good cheer and happiness. But to those acquainted with its occupants it has quite the contrary appearance. True, the owner of the mansion is a well-to-do man, but his wife is a poor-poorer by far than many a wretched tenement house dweller. For the master and the mistress have been estranged for many a long year, and are only husband and wife in name. He occupies one part of the house, she the other, and they might as well live in different spheres for all the company they are to each other. They have horses and carriages galore, but are never seen to drive or ride together.

Last June, when the students from the universities and colleges flocked about the mansion, the couple came home also. But this brought no change to the gloomy life of the two old people, for one was always seen with the mother, and the other, who seemed to be the younger one, alone accompanied the father in his walks and drives.

On pleasant days in the summer the old lady could often be seen sitting on the piazza, but when the husband came home he would bow formally and then pass into the house.

One day the neighbors saw a black and white crane on the door, and the news soon spread that the younger son was dead. Everyone supposed that this great affliction would have the effect of bringing the two old people together, but their proud and defiant attitude remained unchanged toward each other.

What dreadful act had she or he committed against the other to warrant such mutual hatred? It is a mystery which cannot be solved by any number of gossiping neighbors.

A Woman Did It.

By way of throwing more light on the question of Prince Bismarck's disclosures, the Figaro publishes an extract from a letter which it says was made straight from the court of Berlin. In it the writer remarks that this is simply a new incident on the struggle which has been going on since the Prince retired into private life.

The man is disgraced, and the cause of this misfortune, says that the Empress Frederic, having learned from the Princess of Wales the attitude assumed by Prince Bismarck in the Bulgarian question and "toward the nihilists," succeeded in convincing of the fact the Emperor William II., who caused the army and the political world to be informed of the "diabolics" which had severed Russia from Germany and had led her to draw nearer to France.

There was a universal outburst of indignation, particularly among the generals, and some strongly-worded letters were forwarded to Friedrichsrub. Prince Bismarck then declared that he would take up the gauntlet, and come out with counter revelations.

"The man is disgraced," exclaimed the Emperor to his mother, who replied, "I have always said so, and now the eyes of all are opened." Such is the version given by the Figaro, and which may be reproduced without any expression of opinion on the original, as it is attracting much attention, and is the theme of considerable comment.

The Children of the Rich.

Then there were children, conspicuous among them the vulgar little children of the not long rich, repulsively disagreeable to the world in general, and pathetic in the eyes of thinking men and women. They are the sprouting shoots of the gold-tree, beings predestined never to enjoy, because they are the children of the not long rich, men fight for, and will never learn to enjoy what is really to be had only by money; and the measure of value will not be in their hands and heads, but in bank-books, out of which their manners have been bought with mingled affection and vanity. Surely, if any thing is more intolerable than a vulgar woman, it is a vulgar child. The poor little thing is produced by all nations and races, from the Anglo-Saxon to the Chinese. His father was happy in the struggle that ended in success. When it grows old, its own children will perhaps be happy in the sort of refined existence which wealth can bring in the third generation. But the child of the man grown suddenly rich is a living misfortune to two happinesses: neither a worker nor an enjoyer; having neither the satisfaction of the worker, nor the pleasure of the other, hated by his inferiors in fortune, and a source of amusement to his ethic and esthetic betters. From "A Rose of Yesterday," by Marion Crawford, in the Century.

STEALING ELECTRICITY.

Tapping the Trolley Circuits for Use in Houses and Stores.

It is asserted that the stealing of current from trolley circuits for use in houses, saloons and stores, is becoming very common, says the Chicago Record. The police are looking in view of the fact that the stealing of current from trolley circuits for use in houses, saloons and stores, is becoming very common, says the Chicago Record.

A station superintendent in passing a saloon noticed the electric light glow and then start up bright again, as if the saloon had been supplied with a new source of power. He thought that was a queer way for the lights supplied by his station to behave, and he decided to investigate. Being familiar with the technical details of the trolley current system for lighting and the method of supplying electric power for the propulsion and illumination of the cars, he knew that by a very simple experiment he could find out where the current was being stolen. He went, more as to the source of the supply of the current. A lighting company wires a building so that any incandescent lamp in it can be shut off or taken out without affecting the others. In a railway plant the lamps are fed in such a way that if one is shut off all cease to glow. The superintendent passed into a side room of the saloon and quietly unscrewed one of the incandescent bulbs. As he expected, all the lights on the same wire went out. On the following night the current supplying the electric line on that street was again lighted up.

Examination showed that the wire had been tapped near the saloon, the connection with the feed wire being made by means of a nail. A large number of smaller "taps" were found in some cases the job had been done by a bogus "station man," who had called regularly for payment of the current supplied by the saloon. At all events, the wire was found to be the same wire that was used for the stolen current.

Uses of Aluminum.

It is claimed that aluminum plates are destined to become the universal material for lithographic printing, which means a revolution in the lithographic art. Of all the metals that have been tried besides aluminum, says the Aluminum World, to replace the cumbersome lithographic stone, zinc is the only metal which has given any satisfaction, but it was found that zinc could not be depended upon. To insure good work the zinc plates must be absolutely pure, and even many colors can not be printed from zinc with safety. Aluminum has been found to be as good as stone. The metal approaches the physical properties of lithographic stone from its ability to absorb fats or oily substances.

Recent work made of aluminum, affording at the same time exceptional strength and lightness, a pair weighing only 24 ounces. Aluminum articles for the toilet are now made in great variety, among other things, combs, razor handles and hairpins.

Pens made of an aluminum alloy it is claimed write easily and do not rust. A company has put on the market aluminum guitars, banjos, mandolins and lutes. The instruments are made out of one piece of sheet aluminum pressed into shape. They are satin-finished, and not only make a beautiful looking instrument, but give a rich tone.

The Evolving Power of Irrigation.

The evolutionary process of the last twenty years has brought out some very valuable lessons for the future of California. It has demonstrated that irrigation is essential to the highest standard of civilization. The census of 1880 revealed the fact that two-thirds of the gain in rural population stood to the credit of eight counties where irrigation prevailed. The counties which rely upon rainfall had not reached a standstill or scored a victory. The people have always been divided on the question as to whether irrigation is necessary. Those who oppose argue that it breeds malaria and injures the quality of the fruit. These people insist that it is essential to the most scientific agriculture, and to the maintenance of dense population. The last twenty years have answered the question forever. The answer consists of a comparison between the South and the North. The one was born of the irrigation canal; the other of the mining-camp and the wheat-ranch. The one is characterized by a high civilization; the other by a low one.

Demand for Flintlocks.

Strange as it may appear, flintlock muskets are not merely a record of bygone days. The demand for these weapons is increasing. The flintlock musket is a 12-gauge gun. These flintlocks are the Linghams flints, Brandon, Suffolk, England. These flints are chiefly to delight African and other savages, who, having no use for the bolt-action locks, are reluctant to give them up.

The method of manufacturing these gun-flints is very interesting. In the operation of "flaking" the worker will take a lump of flint in his left hand, and placing it on his knee, around which a protecting band of leather has been strapped, gently tap the flint with a hammer, giving it each time a well-defined blow. In every ten or twelve blows, the flint will fall into his hand, and if a good one, be deposited in a pile by his side, all bad ones being discarded. The knappers will take a lump of flint in his left hand, and placing it on his knee, around which a protecting band of leather has been strapped, gently tap the flint with a hammer, giving it each time a well-defined blow. POLICE FORCE OF JAPAN.

Duties of the Patrolmen—The Length of Their Hair Regulated.

The police force of Japan is a large and well-organized department constructed on a European model. In Tokyo the ancient Yendo, which is the capital and seat of government, the earliest form of "watchmen" was organized as "Kawandu" (the Chief of Police in Japan) on his return from Europe nearly a quarter of a century ago but the police force was established on its present footing twenty years ago. It has now a strength of 3,474 (221 chief inspectors and subinspectors). The Police Department is also under police control. For a slender remuneration a large amount of services is expected, says the Sunday at Tokyo. The ordinary city policeman is on duty every other day for twenty-four hours. Eight of these hours he must devote to one of the little boxes, or kobancho, of which there are 338 in the City of Tokyo. For eight hours he must patrol a certain district, returning to his kobancho, and during the remaining eight he may sit or lie on a bench within the inner room of the kobancho, or he may be called upon at any moment if required. Six policemen are attached to each box three by day and three by night, so that while one is resting a second is on the box, and a third in front of the box, and a third is patrolling.

On his off-duty days the policeman is partially employed in making inquiries, serving summonses, filling in census papers or carrying out one or other of the forty-two separate and distinct duties which he has to look after. For a policeman in Japan is supposed to know a little of everything and take a paternal interest in everything in his district. He must report to his superior officer all the rumors and gossip of his district, give accounts of meetings of every kind, religious and political, and keep an eye on all newspapers printed or sold. He must tabulate the people of his district into three classes, A, B, and C, and make a correct census and report upon them several times a year. He must report the condition of all streets, bridges, embankments, and other public works, and notice of accidents, nuisances, diseases, deaths; keep a watch over the quality of all milk, meat and vegetables sold, and report on the children, domestic characters, gambling, drinking saloons, pawnshops, markets, fairs, weights and measures, funerals, festivals, runaways, physicians, and all kinds of theatrical performances and gatherings of the people.

A Japanese policeman seldom has much difficulty in making an arrest. He is invested with all the majesty of the law, and to the Japanese law is supreme. It is almost impossible to find a holding of a solemn court in the street to settle some dispute between the inhabitants. The surrounding crowd shows no disposition to interfere, and the policeman is free to the temper of the ordinary London "Bobby." With the utmost gravity he examines the parties interested, notes down the information given, and then pronounces his decision, which is generally obeyed without question. This absolute strikes the foreigner all the more, because the policeman is usually youthful in appearance and small in figure. Five feet two inches is the standard height, and the medium age for entrance into the force. Every policeman receives minute instructions as to his department, the position of his hands when standing at attention, and the length of his hair, which must not be more than 2 inches in front nor 7 inches of an inch on the neck. The police are for the most part recruited from the old Samurai, the feudal class of past ages, and for the most part they appear to carry out the code of honor handed down to them from generation to generation. They are an intelligent, determined and courageous set of men, well disciplined and said to be above corruption.

Have You Ever Tried?

Have you ever tried to dye over your old garments?

Thousands of hands answer "Yes, and very successfully, too." To those who have not attempted the work we would say, "There is money in it if you use the Diamond Dye."

Old dresses, mantles, jackets, coats, pants and vests, and other articles of wearing apparel can easily be recreated and made fit to wear as if they were new. It costs no more than a few pennies to color the Diamond Dye will save you several dollars. This wonderful transformation and money-saving work can only be done perfectly by using the Diamond Dye. Ask your dealer for them; be sure you refuse all substitutes.

NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS.

Everybody knows how easy it is to make good resolutions on the 1st of January and how easy it is to break them on the 2nd, provided they last at all. Making resolutions which are only to be broken is a bad custom. It is better that none should be made. But people of old times used at the mid-winter festival to take down the doors of their houses to let the old year and the new year in. So, without the undertaking of a new resolution, a bar might have or there be taken down for the passing away of some old evil habit or purpose or thought.

A CHILD CURED OF ECZEMA BY CHASE'S OINTMENT.

"My six-year-old daughter, Bella, was afflicted with eczema for 24 months. The principal cause of eruption being behind her ears. I tried almost every remedy I saw advertised, bought from the chemist and soap, and took the child to medical specialists in skin diseases, but without result. I then tried Chase's Ointment, and since using the ointment has all disappeared, and I can confidently say my child is cured."

At Lakeland Saturday evening Mrs. George Postlewhite was burned to death. She was subject to fits and is supposed to have fallen with a lamp in her hand and set fire to her clothing.

CAIARRI IN THE HEAD
is a dangerous disease. It will lead directly to consumption. Caiarrhi is caused by impure blood, and the true way to cure it is by purifying the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures Caiarrhi because it removes the cause of it by purifying the blood. Thousands testify that they have been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable and do not purge, pain or grip. All druggists, 25c.

Thanksgiving Letter.

I know a little temple,
Its walls are shining low,
Yet up and down its darkened aisles
The blessed angels go.

And he who keeps the temple
Should pray to God tonight
That faith may light the altar flame
And hope may keep it bright;

That love may bring the sacrifice
And give delight to give,
And all the angels innocent
May tarry there to live.

And may no evil spirit
Have in its place or part,
What is the temple beautiful?
The temple of the heart.

A Remarkable Cure—J. W. Jennings, Gifford, spent between $200 and $300 in consulting doctors; tried Dicks and all other treatments; but got no benefit. One box of Chase's Catarrh Cure did more good than all other remedies, in fact I consider myself cured and with a 25 cent box at that.

THE NEW YEAR.

The home is hushed; a stillness great Falls on those waiting there;
A moment when the soul is thrilled
By wondrous music in the air;
Tis over; let glad voices cry;
This is a glorious morn;
A child little is born.

Amid the flowers there is peace,
For, see, that lily there
Holds the attention of the rest—
Her beauty is so rare;
A moment and the spell is past;
A perfume of delight
Goes out from her soft just born—
A lily burst to light.

The midnight hour intensified
Hangs over the earth to-night,
As if awaiting some great change;
Tis coming; the still and white;
Tis coming; the earth is laid again;
The old must disappear.
Hail to the new! A thousand tongues
Greet gladly the New Year.

NEW YEAR'S EVE SONG.

Stay yet, my friends, a moment stay—
Till you can sing good old year.
So long of company of our way
Shake hands and leave us here:
Oh, stay, oh, stay,
One little hour and then away!

The year whose hopes were high and strong
Has now no more to us to bring
Yet one hour more of jest and song
For his familiar sake,
Oh, stay, oh, stay,
One mirthful hour and then away!

The kindly year, his liberal hands
Have lavished all his store,
And shall we turn from where he stands
Because he gives no more?
Oh, stay, oh, stay,
One grateful hour and then away!

Days brightly came and calmly went While yet he was our guest,
How cheerfully the week was spent!
How sweet the evening rest!
Oh, stay, oh, stay,
One golden-hour and then away!

Dear friends with us, some who sleep
Beneath the coffin lid,
What pleasant memories we keep
Of all that's past and fled;
Oh, stay, oh, stay,
One tender hour and then away!

Even while we sing he smiles his last
And leaves our sphere behind.
The good old year is with the past.
Oh, be the new as kind;
Oh, stay, oh, stay,
One parting strain and then away!

THE EMPEROR WILLIAM.

Of the year's changes in the world of high politics nothing has been more striking or perhaps more important to history than the hardening of the Emperor William into an orthodox Tory of the regulation Hohenzollern type. He is nearly in his fortieth year now, and the last of his youthful illusions is fading. He no longer believes in the compatibility of Liberalism and monarchical government. His dream of playing the part of a beneficent providence to distressed lands has utterly vanished. He is now openly on the side of the master as against the workman, of the aristocratic officer as against the private soldier.

He has been conquered by the irresistible logic of his position. William was chiefly interesting before because of the fagacious and hopeful struggle he was making against this logic. Henceforth he will be interesting in quite another sense, as the chief figure in a war of attrition between despotism and democracy. The events of the year have practically wiped out moderate Liberalism in Germany. Unless some unforeseen diversion occurs, the next Reichstag will come perilously near having a Social Democratic majority, as it is now more than half between a Socialist majority among the private soldiery of the Empire.

TO STAIN FLOORS.

A Bit of Household Information of Service at This or Any Other Season.

The knowledge of the use of stains and varnishes and how to polish and clean furniture is invaluable to an economical housekeeper, who can easily, with the help of an intelligent maid, keep her house clean and bright and freshen it up when need be, without calling in the aid of an expensive workman. Formerly stains were confined to the colors nearly resembling natural woods, but of late colors are used—greens, blues, and yellows—which partake in no sense of the nature of paint, but are stains pure and simple, showing the grain of the wood.

The most fashionable stain at present for cottage furniture is green, not a sage green, but good, old fashioned regular green, which when rubbed well into the pores of the wood and then polished, is really beautiful. The two transparent colors, Prussian blue and raw sienna, make, when mixed together, an excellent stain for furniture. It is a desirable, gamboge and Prussian blue. A very little of the latter goes a great way, as it is altogether the most powerful color known and completely overcomes any other pigment if mixed in equal proportions. In staining, it should be borne in mind that it is not paint, but stain, and that a very little should be used, a pound being sufficient to stain a whole set of furniture.

To get a good color the wood must be light. Oak, yellow or white pine, maple, any of these are suitable, and the more grained the better, the more effect of bird's-eye maple, the heavy markings of oak and the picturesque knot so often seen in yellow pine, all coming out particularly well through the translucent color.

The best way to apply stain and bring out the grain of the wood is to put it on quite thick, and rub it off with a linen or cotton rag, and it is absolutely necessary that the wood should be in its natural condition without paint or varnish. By sending a special order to the manufacturers it is easy to get sets of furniture without either; but if it is an open place that is to be renovated it must be thoroughly scraped. After staining, a coat of hard oil finish may be applied as a filler, and then, after it is dry, it should be rubbed all over with the prepared beeswax that comes in cans for floors, and then rubbed with a flannel cloth until it is quite shiny and bright. After the wax is rubbed on it should be allowed to harden before polishing it.

Prussian blue alone makes a very pretty peacock blue stain, raw sienna a yellow or orange, according to the amount of color used, crimson like a lovely red, burnt sienna an almost exact imitation of new mahogany. All these are what are called transparent colors, and are, therefore, especially adapted for staining. When certain colors, if put on this, enough to show the grain in the wood, produce sometimes very pretty effects. When a certain wood has a natural opalescent coloring that is very harmonious with delicate chintzes. Light blue, canary yellow, apple green and pink all may be used on woodwork at stains if applied in the way that house painters like a dog's bark, is a sign that there is something foreign around which shouldn't be there. You can quiet the noise, but the danger may be there just the same. SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod-liver Oil is not a cough specific; it does not merely allay the symptoms but it does give such strength to the body that it is able to throw off the disease.

You know the old proverb of "the ounce of prevention?" Don't neglect your cough. A book which will tell you more on the subject sent free on request.

A Wise Office Boy.

There comes to the office boy a time when he begins to worry about the affairs of the concern that employs him. He is a creature of extremes. He is either whistling like a hysterical callopoe or he answers only in gruff monosyllables. He is either studious with cyclopaedia, or he is careless with feet of lead. His attitude suddenly varies from the most negligent to rigid fastidiousness. It is not surprising that this creature of moods should at some point in his career emerge from serene apathy concerning the affairs of the establishment into a condition of brain-wrecking solicitude.

"I can't help thinking about it," the young man of 14 or 15 was saying; "they ain't running the affairs of this place right."

"You can't do nothin' to make it different."

"In thinkin' 'em up about gettin' in an interview with de boss 'an' givin' him some tips on how ter run de biz."

"Wot's de use o' kickin'! You ain't paid for thinkin'."

"Dat shows yer short-sightedness. Ain't I got no interests ter protect?"

"Youse ain't no stockholder."

"Jes' de same it makes me nervous ter see de way dis 'ting is allowed ter go 'long. Ain't I'm goin' ter go before de prez o' dis here company an' tell 'em a lot fur de good?"

"Wot's dematter wit' mindin' yer own affairs an' enjoyin' life?"

"Ain't I no gambler, but I can't set by an' watch things go ter ruin."

"Sposen I go on in silence an' let de boss wreck de hull concern?"

"Sposen ye does."

"Well, den what becomes o' my tree dollars an' a half a week?"—Washington Star.

—A. H. Lawrence.

The penny-in-the-slot-machine can be found in the remotest portions of the backwoods, and sometimes it is about the only thing to remind one of civilization that can be found there.

A weary hunting party stopped at a small hotel off in the backwoods not long ago, and was looking for a place to sleep. They found a tramp before supper, found after washing that to secure a towel they would be obliged to make use of a slot machine in astonishment. The waiting maid. The sign read: "To obtain a clean towel put a penny in the slot and pull the drawer slowly out." One of the party was somewhat of a pug and, procuring all the coppers he could gather he proceeded to remove the evil coin one at a time. He had reached the fifth towel when the proprietor ordered to wash his hands. He gazed at the run with a look of intense astonishment. The way laughingly complimented the pug upon his enterprise in selling new towels for such a little money. It is needless to say the proprietor later put up a sign that read: "For the use of a clean towel put a penny in the slot."—Harper's Round Table.

The days now begin to perceptibly lengthen.

The legislative assembly of Quebec prorogued yesterday.

The ferry steamers are running between Kingston and Cape Vincent.

Inspector Johnson was in town on Wednesday and visited the schools.

Capt. Taylor was in town this week inspecting craft for the insurance companies.

The O'Connor House was to have been sold by auction on Tuesday, but there was no bid offered.

Thomas Hart has purchased from Mrs. Hannah Jacobus lots 22 and 23, corner of Thomas and College streets.

Colds and grippes have been prevalent as the result of the unseasonable weather of the past two or three weeks.

There is a rumor that Her Majesty the Queen will in this year abdicate her throne in favor of the Prince of Wales.

It would not be amiss for the town council to pass a curfew by-law. It is said to prove very satisfactory in all the towns in which it has been adopted.

R. Bell, of this office, while visiting in Belleville took a walk in the suburbs and saw in one locality water cress growing as fresh and green as it was midsummer.

Hon. E. J. Butler, formerly of Deseronto, is now premier and minister of Justice in the new administration formed in connection with the Knock Parliament of Belleville.

Judging by the result of the recent examination at the Public School Principal Lockhart to make a record at the entrance examination next summer as good as that of last year.

E. J. Edwards, who has been gazetted clerk of the division court, will have his office in the rooms recently occupied by Dr. Dulmage, dentist. He has moved his residence to the house adjoining.

Lieutenant-Governor Kirkpatrick will undergo an operation for an internal complaint from which he has been suffering. He is at present in a private hospital in London, England. No danger is anticipated.

Skating was the great amusement on N.W. Year's day, the ice being black with crowds of young people. The iceboats were to be seen skimming about in all directions. The day was spent in a most enjoyable manner. It was a beautiful day.

Florists and gardeners have found a simple and what is said to be an effective, means of ridding their greenhouses of devastating insects. Tobacco stems are placed on the heating pipes, and the heat brings out the odor of the tobacco, which destroys the pests.

There have been exciting times on the Napanee road, war having been declared as the result of an episode at a school meeting. Two young men came to blows and more hostilities were feared. However better counsels have prevailed and at last accounts all was quiet on Bowen's creek.

The Citizens Band turned out on Tuesday evening and serenaded the newly elected members of the town council. They were handsomely through before a baby blizzard struck them but they stuck to their duty and serenaded the council to their duty on account of the blinding snow.

Mr. Edkins, inspector for the Boston Inspection and Insurance Co., who has frequently visited Deseronto, on engineers all over the province, is very ill in the Toronto hospital, suffering from an abscess and there is but little hope of his recovery.

On Sunday a great many children are wont to start off to Sunday schools from half an hour to an hour ahead of time. As a result they get into all kinds of mischief before the schools open. Parents would do well to favor on their children by allowing them to remain at home until fifteen minutes before the opening hour.

It is quite evident that the ladies of Deseronto do not avail themselves of their leap year privileges, or Registrar Irvine would be able to report more than four marriages during the past six months. In proportion to population, Deseronto has probably the smallest number of marriages of any town in the province.

The Newfoundland legislature will attempt to arrange a convention with the United States so as to secure the free entry of codfish into the American markets, offering in return special privileges to United States products entering the island. Newfoundland is a bad way commercially and its people are departing in large numbers to the United States.

A terrible calamity occurred at Roberval, Lake St. John, Quebec, on Wednesday morning. The convent took fire, a taper having ignited some decorations prepared for the feast of the Epiphany. The flames spread, destroying the building, a fine brick structure. Seven nuns were perished in the flames. All the other inmates fortunately escaped without injury.

Godfrey Durand has opened a bakery in Mrs. Bagg's old premises.

Preparations are being made to organize a Sabbath School Association in Thurlow township.

Sir Joseph Hickson, formerly manager of the Grand Trunk Railway, died on Monday at Montreal.

Robert H. Baker has had his new meat shop neatly painted and decorated. Prices all right at Baker's.

The Deseronto Horticultural Society will receive a grant of over $100.00 this year from the Ontario government.

Hon. Thomas McCreary, of Quebec is dead. For many years he played a prominent part in the political world.

After the organization of the Deseronto Horticultural Society, arrangements will be made for lectures by prominent fruit and flower growers.

A crossing is very much needed across Dundas street from the east side of Brent street. The council will no doubt see to it that it is laid down at an early day.

The weather during the past week has been very mild; on Monday the mercury reached 51 degrees. It has been a little colder since Wednesday. Snow is very much needed.

A young man named Plumley from Napanee broke through the ice and was nearly drowned on New Year's day. He was brought to Deseronto and the doctors said it was a close call.

While handling a carcass of beef Henry Leverton, Gravel road, Richmond, had a finger caught in the chain by which it was suspended, it having been lowered unexpectedly. One joint of the finger was amputated.

A. Oliver and T. Symington were elected commissioners by the Richmond and Napanee Division of the Lennox and Addington County Council. Symington led Oliver by one vote, and Oliver defeated Fryn by 47 votes.

Capt. H. Walker, of the Salvation Army corps, and his estimable wife has been transferred to Cornwall. Both did splendid work in Deseronto and will always be kindly remembered by the citizens of all classes.

The Deseronto Horticultural Society is affiliated with the Ontario Fruit Growers Association. Members of the local society are entitled to all the privileges of that association which includes a copy each month of the Canadian Horticulturist and a distribution of valuable plants, free.

We trust that now the New Year has dawned and the Public Library Board, doubtless turning over new resolutions, it will not be necessary for THE TRIBUNE again to call attention to the fact that the approach to the public library has not been calculated to tempt the attendance of members of parliament, ministers or High court officials, much less editors.

David Fraser, who is walking all the distance from San Francisco along railway ties, passed Deseronto Junction yesterday afternoon about 3:30, having left Belleville at 11 a.m. He stopped with Agent Ravin for 15 minutes and had a chat with him and A. D. McIntyre. He looks quite hearty, but his clothes are the worse for wear, as he has to wear those suit all the distance. He has worn out two pairs of shoes. He is a few days ahead of time, and feels hopeful of winning his bid of $3,000.

Lyndenga Parish.

Rev. A. G. Smith, incumbent of the churches of Lyndenga parish, has obtained leave of absence for three months, and left for London, Ont., where he will complete his studies in medicine. Mrs. Smith accompanies her husband. In Mr. Smith's absence the services at Christ Church and All Saints will be conducted by Rev. J. F. Fraser, B.A., late of Ontario, who has kindly entered upon his duties.

Court Olive Branch.

At a meeting of Court Olive Branch, No. 613, C.O.F., held on Wednesday evening, the following officers were elected for the current year:—J. W. Armstrong, G.R.; J. W. Dougherty, V.C.R.; Rev. J. McTavish, Chap.; G. A. Grant, R.S.; D. McCue, P.S.; J. Fairbairn, Treas.; W. Steggs, S.W.; Rev. J. McTavish, J.; N. P. Taylor, S.B.; A. J. Patterson, J.; W. J. Malley, representative to High Court. This court is making steady progress.

Information Wanted.

Samuel Edmund Jenner, of Hart, Oceana Co., Michigan, was in town the other day endeavoring to get information concerning his sister, Rebecca Jenner, from whom he had not heard for a very long number of years. He had heard that she married a man named Platt or Platt, and that she and her son had been in Deseronto for some years and that she also had been in Thurlow, Prince Edward and Northern New York. He was asked to give him the address of the whereabouts of his sister or her son. Any person who can give information will please forward it to THE TRIBUNE office, Deseronto.

Wedded at Belleville.

A very happy event took place at Belleville, the marriage of Wednesday, 6th inst., when M. J. McCreary, of the Richmond Company's office, Deseronto, son of Rev. W. W. Maclean, M.A., of Belleville, and Miss Anna Adeline Carter, a popular young lady of Belleville, were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed in St. Andrew's church by the father of the bride, in the presence of immediate friends and relatives. The bride was attended by Miss Emerson and J. C. Maclean was best man. The happy couple left by the evening train for Deseronto. With a host of friends THE TRIBUNE unites in hearty felicitations.

It is reported that ten Americans and six Cuban crew of the filibustering steamer Commodore lost their lives in the foundering of the vessel.

Vital Statistics.

Registrar Irvine reports the following vital statistics for the past year:—Births, 16 males and 15 females, total 29; deaths, 12 males and 9 females, total 22. Marriages 4.

The convention will be held at 10 a.m. and will continue until 4 p.m. The purpose of the convention is to organize the township for Sabbath school association work.

Silver Wedding.

Mr. & Mrs. Frank McMaster celebrated their silver wedding or twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage on Monday evening, 4th inst.

In response to their invitations about fifty guests assembled at their residence on Dundas street and there spent several exceedingly happy hours. All were kept busy in pleasant conversation during which many reminiscences of the married life of the hosts were recounted.

Several of the guests contributed excellent music to the evening. A delicious dinner was served on a series of small tables placed at intervals all through the house. Ample justice was done to the delicate viands provided. The waiters being Herbert and Walter McMaster and Wilbert Woodcock.

The guests were all well and happy. It was evidenced by the splendid array of very handsome presents which the worthy couple received during the evening. Among others was a rich silver service, the gift of a number of friends. It was with reluctance that the evening's enjoyment was brought to a close. It was a happy occasion.

WONDERFUL COINCIDENCES.

Time and the Fates Play Strange Games With People and Things.

One of the most extraordinary coincidences that have occurred was the trial of a man in London a short time ago. The prisoner, who was deaf and dumb, was tried on an indictment of brutally assaulting a deaf and dumb girl. The fact that the prisoner and the victim were both deaf and dumb, and that they were both from the same place, was a coincidence that was not explained until a provincial town recently. While a man was walking past a house in a quiet neighborhood, a woman hurried out and suddenly fell dead upon the doorstep. The man ran off immediately in search of a doctor, and arriving at the house of one, rang the bell, but before his summons could be answered he fell dead upon the steps. The shock of what he had seen, accelerated by the speed at which he had run, acting upon a weak heart.

A most remarkable incident took place in a London coroner's court a few days ago. On called twelve names of the jury summoned to attend, it became evident that all the twelve "good men and true" were named either Jones, Smith or Brown, and that one member of the jury was named Robinson. The circumstance caused considerable astonishment and amusement in court, as it was well known.

A short time ago a lady was walking down the street when she happened to see a ring lying upon the pavement in front of a jeweler's shop. By the peculiar pattern of the ring, and the motto inside, she immediately recognized it as one she had lost only a few days before. She picked it up, and the very shop outside which she had found it. Thinking she must have lost it there, and that it had by a series of remarkable incidents remained where she dropped it, she entered the shop to the manager of her extraordinary good fortune.

The manager expressed his astonishment at the coincidence, but answered the lady that it was not as she thought, for a man had been into the shop a few days before, and had bought a ring, valued (without a doubt this particular ring) but when asked to produce it, found that he had lost it, and thereupon left the shop. He had probably dropped it on entering the shop, and the lady had found it. Just as you see, must have dropped it for him to pick it up a few days before. The lady's story, which is corroborated by the jeweler, knocks fiction into a cocked hat.

The Half Rate Dollar.

Sterling Value and Full Strength in Diamond Dyes.

Sixteen ounces of silver, for the coining of $18.00, and silver dollars, can be bought to-day for $9.00.

Think well of the true value of the silver dollar if its coinage were made free and unlimited.

Just another important thought for the ladies. It takes from two to three packages of common imitation dyes to do the work that one package of the Diamond Dyes will do. If you wish to know why, we will tell you. It is simply because the imitation dyes are of a poor quality, and the Diamond Dyes are of a superior quality.

Just think of having to spend thirty cents for adulterated dye for your work, that can be better done by the Diamond Dyes at a cost of ten cents. You will always be on the wrong side as long as you allow yourself to be lured by the cheapness of the imitation dye to supply you with the poor, weak dyes. It is certainly to your pecuniary benefit, but you are the loser in every way. The Diamond Dyes are of a superior quality, and will give you full strength, or will you bind your goods with the cheap dyes, and that cost as much as the "Diamond Dyes"?

Alexander Lancelotti and his son Frederick were stabbed at Montreal by a gang of Italians, who waylaid them near their home. The son of Lancelotti died of his wounds and the younger is in a precarious condition. Two of the Italians have been arrested.

The czar has presented to the public imperial library of St. Petersburg "The Sarmanchik Gospel," written on purple parchment in the sixteenth century, which Englishmen and Americans have been seeking to purchase from the settlement of Sarmanchik, in Anatolia, for $50,000. The czar, desiring to preserve the sacred manuscript in orthodox lands, bought it himself.

THE BEST WAY TO CURE

Disease is to eat well health. Pure, rich food means good health. Good health is the one true blood purifier. It tones up the whole system, gives appetite and strength and overcomes all weakness and pain to disappear. No other medicine has such a record of wonderful cures as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Hood's pills are the best after dinner pill; aid digestion, prevent constipation, 25c.

THE NEW YEAR.

How You May Feel Happier and Better Than in the Past.

Paule's Celery Compound Will Enable you to Thoroughly Enjoy Life.

Act Promptly and Your Fond Desire will be Realized.

Many of our readers can truthfully confess that the year just gone by was a period of pain, suffering, anxiety, disappointment and wretchedness. Some were laid on beds of sickness, weak and helpless; others, ailing and almost broken down, were just able to move about to imperfectly attend to daily duty and work. The sick and ailing ones met with many failures and disappointments in their efforts to regain health. Doctors failed to cure them, and the very ordinary medicines of our times failed to bring back the bliss of health to the pale and wan face.

Those of our readers who were unhappy last year may find a new dawn of their burden and shackles, if they use that marvelous source of health giving—Paule's Celery Compound—that contributed to the happiness of so many thousands in past years.

There is no necessity here to enlarge on the many benefits that may be derived from doing as the present time. Every day it is making well rheumatic, neuralgia, dyspeptic and sleepless mortals, and giving a new life to those afflicted with kidney, liver and blood diseases.

All classes unite in praising and recommending Paule's Celery Compound as the most effective of medicines. The more physicians know of it, the more do they earnestly recommend it for the sick. If you only feel well, happy and vigorous all this year, begin at once with nature's healer and life-giver.

A CONTINENTAL CATASTROPHE.

A SOURCE IN AFRICA THAT DWARFS THE MURKIN IN PHAROAH'S TIME.

If Asia has been scourged by the withholding of those fruitful showers which the clouds have withheld, it is as to be expected. Her sister continent has this year suffered from a disaster hardly less appalling. The riverpest, said to have been introduced into the Nile valley by plague-stricken cattle sent to supply the Italian army with food, found Africa as virgin soil for its ravages. From the mountains of Raselala began its march southward, eating up as it went nine-tenths of the holed herds, wild and tame, of the African continent. The herds upon which the natives of the interior depend so largely for their sustenance were mown down as the meadow grass falls before the scythe, and the famine that followed. Nor does the riverpest discriminate between the domesticated and the wild cattle. The savage buffalo wallowing in the marsh found no refuge of escape from the invisible death. Nor were swift-footed antelope able to elude the swifter dashes of the deadly insect. From the species of antelope died like rotten sheep. The others, for some cause not yet discovered, seem to be immune. For some time it was hoped that the herds of the Zambesi would offer an insuperable barrier to the southerly-marching riverpest. But the subtle contagion leaped the mighty river and began its ravages in Rhodesia. It is the fashion to speak of war as the sum of all evils. The war in Rhodesia has not left 15,000 alive. The milk, the beef, the leather, and the transport of the country were all destroyed. Famine southward the riverpest struck Kama's country, a land which is far richer in herds than Rhodesia. The Kama's herds were mighty herds. They numbered their cattle at one million. When the riverpest left them, 800,000 beasts lay dead on the ground. Khama rejoiced that the percentage of mortality was comparatively speaking, so low. From Bechuanaland, the deadly scourge is traveling away the cattle down to the sea. So terrible a visitation, extending over so wide an area, is almost unknown in the annals of Africa. The grievous murk that smote the herds of Pharaoh was but a parental epidemic compared with this continental catastrophe.

AS WELL AS EVER.

A BRICKMAKER LISTENS TO REASON—USE SIX BOXES OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS AND TELL IT.

Brookville, Jan. 4 (Special).—Mr. W. H. Odell, perhaps one of the best known citizens in the town, has lately recovered from a long and painful kidney ailment. He tells the story of his experience to the correspondent as follows:—
"I have suffered for over a year from kidney disease, the pain in my back being so severe that I was unable to stand to my work. Notwithstanding the published cures of what I called the kidney pills were doing for others I concluded to use them. I have used only six boxes I can say that I am perfectly cured and well so that I can attend to business as well as ever I could."

As a result of continued wet weather throughout the winter, farmers have begun to utilize a part of their manure as a fertilizer for fuel for next year. The market price is only nine cents a bushel, and it is much more precious than coal.

EXPOSURE TO DISEASE.

Does not necessarily mean the contraction of disease provided the system is in a vigorous condition, and the blood pure and the organs in healthy action. When in such a condition contagion is easily resisted and the disease germs can find no lodgment.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine to build up the system because it makes pure, rich blood, and pure blood is the basis of good health. In cold weather it is especially necessary to keep up the health tone because the body is subject to greater exposure and more liable to disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the safeguard of health.

THE MEXICAN DUDE.

THE CHAPEAU IS THE BLOSSOM OF CHARACTER.

Some Amazing Neckties-To His Mind

World Is So Small That He Could Cover It With His Headgear.

The hat is the main strength of the true Mexican dude. Upon these gorgeous neckties, the Mexican dude, in fashion frequently spends $50 or even $100. And these splendid masses of gold and pearl, gray, blue, and red, the average masculine head with the same attitude as would a small town of brick and mortar, play the true Mexican wears his trousers very tight in the leg, and as his legs are always straight, he produces an effect of instability. When you see him crowd by one of those great peaked awnings, you think he is likely to fall down right about his neck.

This same gentleman may run to pursue a goal. There are few real to the same in the city of Mexico, a crowd that with a couple of pounds each—immense things that look more like a double than a single—these trousers extend down each leg of his tight trousers, and it is more than probable that his legs will be embroiled like mad.

After all this he will be seated upon a saddle that the Sultan of a thousand would never use for a charger that proceeds at minding, restrained gallop down the avenue, crowded with fashionable carriages, he will, with his black mustache and vulgar sinister eye, be the true type of the Mexican caballero.

But, on the other hand, the true Mexican style has been combated subtly for years by the ideas from America and from Europe, which have done much to the country. In the rural districts the caballero is still supreme, but in the larger towns and in the capital, the men of the great world and position always resemble the ordinary type of American men of affairs. And the younger generation, who are yet of the old school, are studying the fashions of New York and London with much diligence.

He begins the conflict between the old London crowd of what is correct and an innate love of vivid personal adornment. They clash and the clash is sometimes to be heard for miles. The great London world and position always resemble the ordinary type of American men of affairs.

A black tie, a high white collar, a green opal and a shirt of crimson silk.

At night when he crouches in a doorway with his sombrero pulled still further over his eyes, and his mouth covered by a fold of his serape, you can imagine anything at all about him for his true character is impenetrable. He has mystic and clever counter-balance for the future.

He has two great creeds. One is that politics is a leverage, the other is that Americans are eternally wealthy and immorally stupid. If the world was really of the nature that he believes it to be, you could put his hat over it.

SEARCHLIGHTS-FOUR POLICEMEN.

As a result, light new one of the appointments of the police force.

What is practically a portable electric searchlight has been added to the equipment of the police force. The lamp is no larger than the customary hand lamp, and it is more than probable that his legs will be embroiled like mad.

DANGER IN BARBER SHOPS.

Microbes Lie in Wait for the Heads of Customers.

If there's a chance where germs of all sorts swarm more thickly than anywhere else it is in a barber shop. Hundreds of people come and go, and are brushed and combed and shaved and shaved with the same instruments. Every customer brings in his private stock and leaves counter-balance for the future.

But the more dangerous pests of the barber shop are much smaller. Some of them are invisible, and some are vegetable parasites, minute plants or fungi.

The principal diseases of hair are ringworm, barbers' itch, favus and baldness. Ringworm of the scalp is caused by the fungus trichophyton tonsurans. It causes the growth of the hair to stop, and the hair falls out in patches of various sizes on the head, covered with scales looking like scales, with numerous small broken off stumps of hair. Sometimes there are several such patches. It is a highly contagious disease and difficult to cure. It is only cured by shaving all the hair and pulling out the diseased hair by the roots with a pair of pliers, which hurts. This treatment must be kept up for months.

The cause of ringworm is a fungus called trichophyton tonsurans, which grows in the hair follicles and on the scalp, and flourishes in barbers' brushes and combs.

One of the most common diseases of hair is barbers' itch, also called tenia scyala, or ringworm of the beard. This comes chiefly from later brushes, and causes an itching, redness, and swelling of the beard. The formation of dull red fleshy tubercles. The redness and swelling are at first slight, but increase until the hair becomes dry, brittle, and finally drops out. The skin becomes thick and sensitive, so that the unfortunate victim would like to take chloroform every time he is shaved. Barbers' itch lasts a long time, and often gives rise to permanent disfigurement. The cause is another fungus, somewhat like the ringworm fungus. It is always caused by the brushes and later combs, which become impregnated with the fungus.

Barbers also take no special pains with their brushes, in which case the brushes become zoological gardens, or else they do not wash them as they should every day with soap and water. In the last, although free from wild beasts, they become famous botanical gardens.

In the result of a botanical nature that gives rise to the microscopic plant collections, which cause the three diseases—ringworm, barbers' itch and favus.

Thousands of Scotch Hearts Have Plighted Troth Through the Office.

A famous relic of ancient love and love has been placed in the Toronto Archives of the Museum, at Toronto, in the "Plighting Stone of Lairg."

Its history goes further back than any one can remember, far beyond the time when the Scotch people were known to be a nation, but it is a relic of a nation that has been used by the Scotch people for centuries before Robert Bruce and his bold clan made Scotland ring with their shouts and the sound of battle. For it is a Scottish stone, of course, its name tells that.

It is declared by those who know that thousands of true Scotch hearts have plighted troth through an office well toward the top that was made by nature more centuries ago than one likes to think of. This remarkable Druidical relic would be a fit companion to the Black Stone, for while by the latter tongue-guess power to charm, by the other one is enabled to win the charmer.

There is nothing of the sort in the world and it is considered a matter of very great surprise that the good folk of Sutherlandshire, the original home of the stone, ever allowed it to be taken from the place where it has stood so long.

Mr. David Boyd, curator of the Canadian Museum, treasures the stone as he would the apple of his eye. He is greatly enthused over the addition to the Museum. This is what he writes concerning it: "What is probably the oldest known relic of the past, the Black Stone of Sutherlandshire, is now in the possession of the Canadian Museum in Toronto. This ancient relic of the faith and superstition of our ancestors is supposed to date as far back as the time of the great Druids of prehistoric times. For centuries it has been used by the people of the north in the north as a witness to the vows and pledges of young and old in matters of love and commerce."

Some of the marriage ceremonies have always been characterized by simplicity, and those brought about through the "Plighting Stone of Lairg" are regarded as particularly sacred. Here the lovers met in the first instance, merely to promise each other fidelity, and then, on a subsequent occasion to renew their vows and accept each other for better or worse. Disgrace eternal or even death was supposed to follow the violation of such a pledge, and to universal was the belief in the virtues of an oath or affirmation sworn through the stone that it was resorted to by all, and in the making of every kind of bargain.

Sales of land, exchanges of cattle, purchase of land and agreements to perform military or domestic service were ratified in the presence of a witness among the lost sciences, so few women master the accomplishment or even acquire any approach to perfection in this exercise, which is the foundation of all others. Every one succeeds in repelling themselves along by means of their feet, but that is not true walking. An English authority says: "The body should be held erect, the shoulders down, chest extended and the leg moved from the hip, the whole figure above being immovable."—Philadelphia Times.

Overfastidious Taste.

Men overfastidious in their choice of tea have been victims of their too vivid imaginations. One man objected to a brand of tea purchased by his wife, pronouncing it "weeds," and accordingly selected a choice kind. His next cup of tea was pronounced perfect. The color was good, and "That's a cup of tea for you" was said with emphasis as he drank the second cup made from the "weeds" his wife had bought.—Good Housekeeping.

The surprise is not that they stole it, but that the minister did not know it. They had changed since the time the minister said, "Silver and gold have I none."—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Life Told in School.

It has always been father's purpose to give his children a fair education, but as the family increased in size and numbers and father's salary would not grow in the same proportion, he found it necessary to cut down some of the avenues of expenditure. One of his first thoughts was that of the shoe bill for the family. Said he, "I'll be the cobler when my shoes need repairing after this." Unfortunately my shoes gave out first, and the next day was set for repair day. Father brought from the shop where he was working some of the old belting that had been laid by. This leather was thoroughly saturated with oil and as I entered the schoolroom with my new taps on my shoes the oil would form a mark on the floor, just like a footprint on the newly fallen snow, and what good excuse to tell I couldn't think of.

It became an excuse to the whole school, and I was wishing somehow I might take a vacation. Finally the teacher noticed it. I was called up to the desk, leaving my track all the way, and asked to explain. Shaking like a leaf, I told the story. My brother Jack and I had got to fighting the other day in the cellar, and he threw me in a pan of grease that was near by cooling. That settled the teacher, but the other element of the school were not satisfied until they stood me on my head and looked at my shoes.—Cor. New York Recorder.

In a City Restaurant.

A trifling incident noted me long ago in a city restaurant tells its own story and needs no spoken word. Two girls, possibly attendants in a shop, were sitting together eating their luncheon, and one was holding forth to her companion on an experience which had just befallen her.

"I came in here," said she, "and got this seat, but won't long before an old lady came in and sat next to me. She took out one pair of gloves and put on another. Then she stared and stared at the bill of fare and laid it down. I thought first she couldn't read a word. Then she turned around to me.

"Why don't you sit next to the window?" says she.

"I didn't take any notice, and in a minute she said it again. Then I answered her: 'No,' says I, 'this is my seat, and I'm going to keep it.'

"She turned way round in her chair then and looked me all over. Then she looked away. But I guess she knew I'd got the best of her, for she did have the manners to say:

"I beg your pardon."

"She spoke real loud, and I noticed she looked kind of surprised."—Youth's Companion.

Sticks to Mercantile Life.

Many young men choose a mercantile position for the present only without thought or intention of making it a permanent business. The result is that sometimes we find these men at 30 years receiving no more pay than they did when only 18.

There is an army of this class of young men behind them today. They are an unskillful, pitiable class. They start listlessly in their departments and are as unobservant of what's going on around them as the inanimate figures which one sees at the entrance of clothing establishments.

Many of them let slip grand opportunities of becoming great business factors in the commercial world and have doomed themselves to the treadmill of common drudgery. Singleness of purpose implies self-reliance, without which a young business man is not thoroughly qualified for a successful business career. —Goods Economist.

Pleasure in the Heavens.

There is a satisfaction in learning the names and positions of the stars that does not belong to the study of the planets. The stars apparently never change so far as their position relative to each other is concerned. The planets are always moving, and to those who do not watch the heavens with particular attention it is a cause of surprise every once in a while to find a "new star" adorning a certain section of the heavens.

However, this newcomer be carefully observed from night to night, it will be found to change its distance from the fixed stars, and the observer will discover that it is planet and at liberty to wander about from place to place under the sole condition that it obeys certain rules of motion. When the bright stars that grace the heavens become familiar to observers, they will know just what to expect on each succeeding season.—New York Times.

Customers Too Particular.

Some years ago the proprietors of a so called "ulster house" in London placed in their windows a placard setting forth a new rule of their establishment, namely, that no orders given by Americans were paid for beforehand. The proprietors on being interviewed declared that American ladies were much too hard to please—infinately more so than English ones. They said that in receiving their things made to fit or they refused to take them. "I had an ulster sent back to me the other day, for instance," he remarked, "by an American customer who said it was longer in front than it was at the back." Only that and nothing more—Lucy Hooper in Home Journal.

The Name of Stebbins.

The Stebbins family is fairly numerous. It is not now a classic name. Its origin is obscure. More the shame for them. It is by right a classic name, borne as it was by the first of Christian martyrs—St. Stephen, some of the apostles, and St. Stephen, the Dutch way of spelling it. Spell it in Spanish—Esteban. Drop the initial silent e and then you have Steban. Among the ignorant the step to Stebbins is very short. And the honorable name of St. Stephen taken on degradation, even as the fine old Norman-French name D'Aubaine becomes the homely Dobbin.—Davenport Democrat.

NOVEL TURKISH BATH.

An Electric Quilt Invented Which Will Heat the Body Comfortably.

You can take a Turkish bath in the parlor. With the electric quilt which has been invented by the manufacturer, the electrician, and Member of the Royal Society, you can not only save yourself the cost of a bath ticket, but you can bathe amid all the comforts of home. All you have to do is to wrap yourself in a quilt, turn on a stopcock and wait. And you do not have to wait long, either. In thirty seconds from the time the stopcock is turned, you are weltering in a bath of 110 degrees Fahrenheit, without steam, without visible sign of heat, and better than all, without inconvenience to any one else who may be in the room.

One of the peculiar signs that may be seen in the parlor of a house where the new electric quilt is kept is that of a woman with a thick Turkish quilt around her, taking a Turkish bath, while all the windows of the room open, while persons standing within a foot of her are shivering from the chilly atmosphere outside. The owner of the quilt may also use it as an ordinary bed covering.

The invention is called the thermogen, but it is a common quilt, all the same. The only difference is that, in addition to the cotton, wool or eider down of which it is made, there is also a coil of wire. The coil is bent and has many joints, so that it will move freely and in any direction like a coat of mail in olden times. It is embedded in the soft body of the quilt, and through it a current of electricity is permitted to flow. It is this which produces the heat, but the heat is moderated by the layer of material fast between the warm and the cool water.

The heat is distributed over the person who takes the parlor Turkish bath with uniform strength from every part of the quilt. After a time, the household electric system will give all the current that is needed.

In case the heat is excessive and threatens to scorch the bather, there is a fuse at one end of the quilt which instantly melts at the danger point, and the current is cut off.

Physicians who have tested the new thermogen believe it will be a great aid to their cure of consumption with the electric quilt. After a time, the household electric system will give all the current that is needed.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The report that the health of the pope is very delicate is couched.

James Hodge, of Hamilton, shot himself dead on the stairs at the city.

The queen has contributed £500 for the relief of the famine sufferers in India.

Geo. W. Dufos, of Reblin, and Clara A. Balton, of Richmond, were married Jan. 8th.

The Sultan has exonerated his Armenian patriarch, Osmanian, the grand cross of the order of Medjidie.

W. H. Walker, the well-known graphist, mine owner of Ottawa has assigned for the benefit of his creditors. The liabilities amount to about $140,000.

The Raleigh, N. C. Tribune, the only republican daily newspaper in North Carolina, was the first appearance Monday. It is an eight page paper.

The vault of the City Bank, Chardon Ohio, was opened by the city of Chardon, day morning and some valuable papers to the value of $2,000 were taken.

T. J. McWilliams, of Shawville, Que., who represented the drug firm of Natchop & Lyman, Toronto, dropped dead at Deseronto, Que., while engaged in ciling his wagon.

Miss Grace Searles, a young Port Rowan lady, was taking a ride in a buggy in her father's barn when the shaft exploded, entering her side, inflicting a fatal wound.

Almost the entire business portion of Newark a village twenty miles south east of Los Angeles, Cal., was destroyed by fire Saturday night. Loss $100,000, most of which is covered by insurance.

Orders have been given for the complete overhaul of Buckingham palace, Marlborough, and Clarence house, where the crowd of foreign royalties coming to the queen's sixty years' reign jubilee in June are to be put up.

Don Carlos, the pretender to the throne of Spain, will abdicate in favor of his son, Don Jaime. This action is said to be due to the scandal arising from the recent appointment of Prince Elvira, Don Carlos' daughter, with a married aristocrat.

While the population of the British West Indies increases at the rate of 14,000 annually, the sugar exports have fallen twenty-five per cent in the last four years. The French sugar planters in Martinique and Guadeloupe are as pale as a plait as those in the British colonies.

Henry Labouchere, M. P., the well known radical leader and editor of Truth will be the guest of the National Liberal club at a dinner to be given on February 3rd. The dinner is to be given in recognition of Mr. Labouchere's public services in journalism. No political importance attaches to the event.

The debate on the address in the imperial house is expected to last over two weeks, and there is increasing uneasiness among the ministerialists as to its issue. No defeat of the government is anticipated, but it is feared there will be such a depletion of the cabinet majority as will force the cabinet to deal with such matters with inconvolution of promptitude.

True Love Side Tracked by an Orange.

A young lady said the other day that she hated oranges because one had come between her and her lover. It was called on her one evening, and after sitting awhile had produced a couple of bright Florida oranges out of his pocket and suggested that each eat one. She now says that she cannot drive out of her mind the sight of his nose, cheeks and chin dripping with juice, and he has been whispering something horribly sinister about her. Evidently you cannot love a girl and a citrus fruit at the same time.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Eviding a Law.

When Ben Bur was a young lawyer the selectmen of Lowell, then a town, issued a mandate that all dogs should wear muzzles. The next morning Ben walked down town, followed by his big Newfoundland dog, with a very small muzzle tied to the end of its tail. Ben remarked, "My dog is wearing a muzzle." A callow imitator of Ben living in Ward One has fastened a bicycle bell under his saddle and after, he has been fun when a bloodstain stops him because he has no bell on his "bike."—Springfield Homestead.

Altogether Too Familiar.

Dr. A. T. Pierson, in some pithy, practical hints on pulpit oratory, says that to be winning is to be wise, but it must not be overdone. The man who is an evangelist, who got into the habit of calling his audience "dear sons," inadvertently he would say as he passed from place to place, "Dear Belfast sons," "Dear Deseronto sons," and he knew it he was saying, "Dear Cork sons," which convulsed his Irish audience.—London Tit-Bits.

NAPANESE MILLS.

Jan. 13th.—Dear TRIBUNE we wish you every success during 1897. We have a little snow scarcely enough for sleighing.

The Cement Co. are hauling clay which they were unable to do during the soft weather.

Mrs. Robt. Madden an old and respected resident of this town, near his village, Jan. 2nd, after a long illness. She lived such a life endeared her to all who came in contact with her. Whenever there was sickness or death in the neighborhood she was invariably found comforting and assisting. Deceased was 65 years of age, and leaves a husband and four sons viz: E. J. Madden, of Newburgh; J. H. Madden, (Deceased); J. H. Madden; John and George residing on the farm. The funeral took place on Tuesday the 5th at Newburgh Methodist church and was attended by a large concourse of relatives and friends.

Miss Minnie Pybus who with ill has recovered.

Mrs. Geo. Cook is visiting at Wesley.

Mrs. and Mrs. Todd who have been visiting Mrs. J. Jackson during the holidays, returned to their homes on Monday, N. Y.

Mrs. J. Boyer, of Deseronto, is attending her grandmother, Mrs. Granger, who is quite ill.

Mrs. McCall visiting in Trenton returned home last week.

GRAVEL ROAD.

Jan. 12th.—There was a large turnout at Mr. Kimmerly's sale on Thursday last. Mr. Jockey friend from the Slash road was there and captured the best horse of the lot.

John McNeil has returned from his trip to the Northwest and is looking well.

Reveling meetings have been in progress at "McLean."

Henry Leveon lost the end of one of his fingers last week while killing a beef. It will cost him the price of the beef to have it cut out.

Some of the country butchers are feeling angry because others are coming on the market to sell meat.

Mr. Oliver has erected a fine hen house on his place. Go to Oliver's rig on market days for fresh eggs.

Mrs. C. Stratton, of Deseronto, met with an accident while driving home. She met some team driving home, which did not give her half the road and her rig caught in one of the wheels and the buggy was totally wrecked.

Jan. 20th.—Mr. Black is home from New York and is looking well.

Wm. Smith's team ran away last Tuesday while coming from Deseronto. The axle broke as he was turning the corner of Fourth and Dundas Streets. His face was badly cut and bruised.

A team belonging to Albert Mountain ran away the same day. He went to look for Mr. Oliver's woods, and when he was coming out the team must have thought he was a bear as they took to their heels, leaving the wagon in the woods for the bear to ride home on.

The Misses Loucks, of Napanee, are the guests of H. Root, of Richmond.

P. McGinnis is waiting for snow to commence his shanty work in Frankford.

We expect some chapping along the gravel road as soon as the Rainnie boys get things settled.

Come girls, look out for that boy who lives alone at the Junction.

Some of the men around here are going wild over the gold mines. Go it, Charley, there is money in it.

I guess the Gravel road butchers are getting rich.

TYNDINAGA RESERVE.

Francis Claus, Jr., is reported to be very ill.

Mrs. Isaac Smart has been removed to the hospital at Belleville.

The remains of Mrs. Peter J. Brant, whose death occurred on the 14th inst., were deposited in the vault of the Deseronto cemetery on Sunday last.

The remains of the late Mrs. Samuel McDowell whose death occurred on the 14th inst., was also deposited in the vault on Saturday last.

The deputation which visited Ottawa last week in the interest of the young men, were quite successful, the Indian Department having agreed to remit out of the funds of the Band, the sum of $10,000 for the benefit of the young men who have heretofore not been provided for.

A number of Indians have petitioned the government to amend the act as to admit of immediate enfranchisement of the whole Band. It is rather an unreasonable request as the majority of the Indians are opposed to such. The law allows the enfranchisement of Indians subject to a three years probation. If within that time their conduct is such as would warrant a good citizenship they then become enfranchised. However, a general council of the band will be held on Wednesday, Feb. 3, when the matter will be fully discussed.

GREINA.

Jan. 20th.—The farmers here have been into the woods of late chopping but the weather has not favored them yet with snow to draw it. They seem to be at a standstill now waiting for something to turn up.

Our school is in good working order. Miss Carlo is doing good work. It has been attended by pupils from other sections making the attendance over thirty.

On account of the rain on Sunday we had no service at night. The prayer meeting on the morning was well attended and a great many added to the church through the efforts of the local talent which is a credit to the community.

Our pastor called a meeting to consider about having a tea meeting. It was decided to have the annual Tea on Tuesday the second of February, since then the committee have engaged a party of nine talented young men of Napanee, who will take charge of the programme of vocal and instrumental music, readings, etc., which will be all up to date and a good time assured. It is interesting to have been sent to the Editor of THE TRIBUNE to act as chairman and the Rev. J. R. Butler, of Roblin, G. H. Copeland, of Deseronto and W. A. Peck, of Napanee. It will be one of the rare treats to attend the Greina tea meeting.

We are much pleased to hear that Mr. Goodman who was thought to be seriously ill, is much better and there are hopes of his ultimate recovery.

SABBATH SCHOOL WORKERS.

CONVENTION AT MELROSE.

On Tuesday, Jan. 19th, a meeting was held in the Presbyterian church, Melrose for the purpose of organizing Tyndinaga workers for the Sabbath school.

In the morning the weather was bitterly cold and many were detained on their way to the school. Nevertheless when the hour of opening the afternoon session arrived there was a large number of delegates present, Deseronto and all parts of the township being represented by delegates and other friends.

John C. Holgate, of Foxboro was chosen chairman and McFarlane, of Melrose, secretary. The proceedings were opened by devotional exercises conducted by Rev. D. O. McArthur, M.A., of Melrose, and Messrs. Leslie and Ray.

On motion of Rev. J. Paul, seconded by J. Eaton, it was resolved to organize Tyndinaga for Sabbath School work.

The Chairman then appointed Rev. D. O. McArthur and Messrs. Winkler, Cole, Ray and Russell a nominating committee.

Delegates representing the different schools then presented reports of the past year's work. Reports were given from the Melrose school at Melrose, Deseronto, Melrose, Deseronto, Emmons station, Salem and Linton and the Presbyterian school at Melrose and Deseronto. The Deseronto West End Mission. The reports showed a year of progressive work.

The reports represented the Sabbath school workers and scholars and the amounts raised were tabulated and published. Several of the schools closed down for the winter, a fact which was a serious loss to the cause. It was not generally regarded with favor. The reports, however, showed that the schools were doing an excellent work and that the districts stand well in this respect.

"Work more work and better work," was the subject of an address by Isaac Eaton, a veteran Sabbath school worker, of Melrose. Among other things Mr. Eaton emphasized the necessity of more work to counteract the spurious literature so prevalent, and the necessity of more work to counteract the spurious literature so prevalent, and the necessity of more work to counteract the spurious literature so prevalent.

HOCKEY MATCH.

The hockey match between Trenton and Deseronto last night was witnessed by a large number of spectators, and was contested. It resulted in a victory for Trenton by a score of 5 to 1. The Trenton team arrived by the mixed train and were met at the rink by the Citizens' Band. Wm. Rockwell, of Napane, acted as referee; W. H. Stafford was umpire for Deseronto; and D. Philon for Trenton. The first goal was scored by Jamieson for Deseronto, the others were won by Trenton. Deseronto showed to good advantage notwithstanding age and weight, and lack of practice. The Trenton team, at various times it was difficult to find the puck. Woodcock and Prickett played well for Deseronto. Edwards, with only one goal, amounted to $20. The visitors were hospitably entertained after the match, lunch being served at the O'Connor House. The team were constituted as follows:

DESERONTO. Goal W. Nolan
Clinton Point McCauley
Woodcock Cover Point Crowe
Jamieson Right Wing E. Philon
Prickett Right Centre G. Nolan
Edwards Left Wing H. Armstrong
Nasmith Left Centre H. Philon

TOWN COUNCIL.

A meeting of the Town Council was held Thursday evening, Jan. 21st.

Present—Mayor Rathbun; Reeve Dryden; Deputy Reeve Richardson; Council—Stoddard, Smith, Gault, Irvine, Clement, Oliver, Mallow and Farnham. The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and approved.

A communication was read from G. E. Deroche asking to be appointed to the position of solicitor for the Town of Deseronto and suggesting a salary of $100 if so appointed. G. E. Deroche, Reeve Dryden, seconded by Councilman Gault, was resolved to engage Mr. Deroche at a salary of $50, all other officers to be allowed to collect as much as necessary to defray the arrangement of this matter was left to the Committee on Legislation.

Accounts were presented by the Rathbun Company for legal advice, $100; in ice; G. E. Deroche $3 for legal advice; and G. Stewart for $10.75, meals for firemen. May 25th. Councilman Irvine, for the committee, reported that the sum of $150 against the Reform Association which remained unpaid. These accounts were referred to the Finance committee.

Majority and minority reports were presented from the committee appointed to strike standing committees. The only difference of moment was in connection with the chairmanship of the Town Property committee, Reeve Dryden, of the minority wishing Councilman Irvine to continue in that position. The yeas and nays were—Dryden, Sexsmith, Parham, Oliver and Richardson—5; Nays—Gault, Irvine, Mallow, Clement, Hamilton, Stoddard, 6.

The majority report was then read, and the standing committees are as follows: Finance—Dryden, Richardson and Oliver. Streets, Market and Gas—Richardson, Gault and Parham.

Town Property, Fire and Police—Clement, Stoddard and Mallow. Charities—Dryden, Mallow and Clement. Legislation, Bylaws and Printing—Oliver, Sexsmith and Gault.

Court of Revision—Irvine, Parham, Sexsmith, Stoddard and Gault. The Mayor reported that G. E. Pearson had been legally advised that his property was not exempt from taxation. The committee to whom the matter was referred recommended the collection of G. E. Pearson's taxes.

The Mayor presented a list of parties reported by Mr. Butler as now taking water from the waterworks system, etc. On motion of Deputy Reeve Richardson, seconded by Reeve Dryden, the management of the waterworks system was placed under the direction of the Town Property, Fire and Police committee, who are to report also what remuneration will be accorded the clerk for extra duties in collection of water rates.

Collector Gwynne reported $750 of taxes yet unpaid. The time was extended for another month, with instructions to collect accounts due immediately with interest additional.

Council adjourned.

TRIALS OF A TRAVELER.

One of Them Called a Chambermaid to Visit His New Trip.

You have heard of the man who had employed a new servant, fresh from a country town. The man had come highly recommended as honest, industrious and intelligent, and in appearance he evidently justified his sponsors. His employer returned after a couple of days' absence to find that the new servant had been cleaning up generally, and particularly in the cellar, where he had secured all the dust and run off of the wine bottles.

Well, I know a man who had a similar experience, though, perhaps not quite so readily comprehended by the general reader. This man had traveled a great deal and had, I find, the most curious tastes. His wife was travel. Alpine climbing carried what all alpenicists, on which they turned the records of their mountain triumphs—the name of the mountain climbed, height, date, etc. They overran the mountain regions of Europe, bragging of their exploits and proving them by the stick. I can show a straight record of the Swiss Alps myself—having bought it at Interlaken, where it had evidently been left in pawn by some impecunious amateur mountaineer. I had climbed Mont Blanc, I was told, and got my record by something after the manner of the man who bought his ancestors in the "Pirates of Penzance."

But to return. My friend didn't carry a notched stick, but he had trunk and grip and typewriting machine case and habcock covered with medals. They were that, just what an awfully wide awake fellow he was and where he had been and how often. They were the record of his travels over the world, and as he had been about a good bit they were curious. It used to give my friend, who is well known in New York, the amusement of showing the look of awe with which these relics were regarded by porters and baggage men and hotel clerks wherever he went. They were that, just what an awfully wide awake fellow he was and where he had been and how often. COQUETTES AS BENEFACTORS.

From an ethical standpoint, at the risk of appearing paradoxical, I will go as far as to assert that the coquette is your true philanthropist. To begin with, she is generally a "man's woman." That term immediately generates a prejudice in all well regulated minds, and yet why should it? Dudley Ward, the son of her, "the coquette is a happy combination of qualities somewhat difficult to describe."

Mrs. Rockett says: "A coquette for whom she has devoted her life, and nature more. She has taste, elegance, spirit and understanding." Warner says: "She is all these and more. To begin with, she is old enough to know her own mind, and young enough to need her own heart. She is a creature of infinite tact, whom every outward semblance of a man interests profoundly. She is always at her best, and she contrives to get out of him the best there is. She listens well and grows sympathetic as she listens."

"Has he a special weakness? She half tempts him to believe it is a virtue. An adopt in the subtlest forms of flattery, she makes the most of his vanity, and even when he is at last, and yet, above all, she remains sincere. Her interest in him is real and survives the fleeting moment. He is a man—this is to say, in her the brightest page in nature's book. She respects convention, knowing well when she may venture to be unconventional, yet she is unapproachable and irreproachable. In return he adores her."

George Eliot says: "One's self satisfaction is the worst of all vices. It is very unpleasant to find depreciated." The men's woman, with a word, or a gesture, or a look, conveys to her companion the sense of her own interest, not so much for the sake of pleasing, as because it is true. Can such conduct be actuated by any other motive than that of the purest and truest philanthropy?—Lippincott's.

The Writer.

Talk is arising, as it has off and on since the now worn-out subject of "women's rights" came before the public, about women in place of men for writers at the private dinner table. The man is so infinitely superior to the woman in the public that it does not seem possible that he can ever be superseded in private life. A man will wait upon a man as well as upon a woman, and a woman as well as upon a man in a hotel or restaurant, provided always he expects to receive a tip and a good word, and a woman as well as upon a man in a hotel or restaurant, provided always he expects to receive a tip and a good word, and a woman as well as upon a man in a hotel or restaurant, provided always he expects to receive a tip and a good word.

CALIFORNIA PEARLS.

The Great Majority Found Are of Little Value.

The beds of the gulf of California produced enormously for awhile, yielding many pearls of great size. For some time, to be sure, the output of the gulf has been pounds of the "gems of the ocean" annually. In 1750 a collection of big pearls was made there for a collar that became the property of the Emperor of Spain, and which is even now one of the most valuable possessions of the Iberian crown. As late as 1881 a black pearl, valued at $10,000, and weighing 15 carats, was obtained from those waters. One of twice that weight, light brown and worth $8,000, was secured in 1888, and in the same year a merchant of La Paz, named Hidalgo, brought from an Indian for a pearl of beautiful luster, which he sold in Paris for $5,000. All the black pearls got from the gulf of California are secured by diving methods, but the rubber clad diver, provided with a tube to furnish him with air, is able to descend to a depth of 100 fathoms, where he searches for pearls.

The pearl fisheries of the gulf of California are farmed out by the Mexican government to a San Francisco company, which employs about 400 men. It is a very rough and tumble business, and the divers have no difficulty in separating them from the rocks on which they grow by cutting the "byssus" which secures the mollusk as an attachment to its resting place. The bivalves thus obtained are carried by schooners to La Paz and exported under official inspection. One thousand of them may yield not a single pearl of any size, while from a dozen shells $20,000 worth may be obtained. The great rarity of pearls found are of little value. The final process employed is to squeeze the meat of the oyster in the flat, just a pearl shell, and to look for the nucleus of the bivalve.—Boston Transcript.

As a General Rule They Came From the Smaller Countries.

Portugal is a small country, with a land area one-tenth that of the state of New York and with a population of 600,000 less than that of the state of Pennsylvania, but it has turned out in its time a considerable number of pearls. It is a happy combination of qualities somewhat difficult to describe. Mrs. Rockett says: "A coquette for whom she has devoted her life, and nature more. She has taste, elegance, spirit and understanding." Warner says: "She is all these and more. To begin with, she is old enough to know her own mind, and young enough to need her own heart. It is the pattern of the heel of the Granby Rubber and Overshoe. The next time you buy a pair of rubbers or overshoes ask for Granby's and look for this pattern on the heel. There is no need to take a Granby that is not made in the true Granby style, because they are made to fit every shape of shoe. A rubber that does not fit the boot will draw the foot. Granby Rubbers are thin, light, elastic and fit perfectly. They wear like iron.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE BURIAL OF GEN. MAUPO.

THE DETACHMENT THAT RECOVERED THE BODY.

BOUND TO AVENGE HIS DEATH—SHOT AT THE BURIAL PLACE—A DREADFUL ENCOUNTER WHEN THE CURSE HEARD OF THE KILLING OF THE GENERAL.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 18.—A letter was received here on Friday from Lieut. Col. Adolfo Hernandez, now in command of the department of the Cuban army escaped near Havana, giving the true account of the death of the general and his subsequent burial. He says that he was in command of the detachment that recovered the body from Major Cristobal's company and afterwards buried it, his statement should settle the matter. It is dated Jan. 9, from the "Escambray" near Havana. The letter says: "On Dec. 7th we suffered a great misfortune in the tragic death by ambush of our leader, General Maupo. This is the greatest misfortune that has befallen our army since the beginning of the war, but only encourages us to fight the harder and avenge his death. We were encamped near the light that day, and heard the firing."

"Maupo came across the trocha, unknown to us, with forty men. More than 1,500 Spanish soldiers were waiting for him at the light, ambushed him. He rode into it and fell at the first fire."

We heard the firing and thinking some of our men were attacked by the Spanish guerrillas, started off to one of their aid, though when we reached the scene of the slaughter it was mostly over, and we were told that Maupo was dead, and that the enemy had his body tied to a horse's tail and were taking it off. Our men were terribly frustrated over the report, and begged to be allowed to go back and begin the war, but only encourages us to fight the harder and avenge his death. We were encamped near the light that day, and heard the firing."

We heard the firing and thinking some of our men were attacked by the Spanish guerrillas, started off to one of their aid, though when we reached the scene of the slaughter it was mostly over, and we were told that Maupo was dead, and that the enemy had his body tied to a horse's tail and were taking it off. Our men were terribly frustrated over the report, and begged to be allowed to go back and begin the war, but only encourages us to fight the harder and avenge his death. We were encamped near the light that day, and heard the firing."

"Maupo came across the trocha, unknown to us, with forty men. More than 1,500 Spanish soldiers were waiting for him at the light, ambushed him. He rode into it and fell at the first fire."

It is what gives Hood's Sarsaparilla its great popularity, its constantly increasing sales, and enables it to accomplish its wonderful and unequalled cures. The combination, proposed and proved, of Hood's Sarsaparilla and the blood purifier, are unknown to other medicines, and make Hood's Sarsaparilla

Peculiar to Itself

It cures a wide range of diseases because of its power as a blood purifier. It acts directly and positively upon the blood, and the blood reaches every nook and corner of the human system. Thus all the nerves, muscles, bones and tissues come under the beneficent influence of

Hood's Sarsaparilla

The One True Blood Purifier. $1 per bottle. Hood's Pills cure Liver, Bile, and Bowel troubles. Easy to take, easy to get.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS.

To the Editor of THE TRIBUNE.

SIR.—Being aware that many farmers about to build barns, stables or silos, or many others finding it necessary to repair, remodel or replace old stables or barns are interested in the use of concrete which is believed to be the cheapest and most durable floor and walls when properly handled, the officers of the East Hastings Farmers Institute have engaged an expert in the person of Isaac Usher, of Toronto, to address the fourth coming meeting at Shaanville on the 25th inst., and at Tweed on the 26th on this subject.

Among the many interesting subjects to be discussed at these meetings there is one of more general interest than this, and as Mr. Usher is competent to give the necessary information on this matter, all persons desirous of obtaining thorough practical knowledge of the use and cost of concrete would do well to attend.

DEEP WATERWAYS.

BRITAIN, N. Y., Jan. 15.—A New dispatch from Washington says: The report of the Deep Waterways Commission, which was submitted to the president by Mr. Russell, of Massachusetts last week, will probably be submitted to Congress within ten days. It is learned that the commission favor the general idea, but owing to the enormous cost of making the Erie a ship canal that scheme is not recommended. The Canadians favor the St. Lawrence route to the sea, but the United States representatives on the commission do not particularly commend this plan because Canada would absolutely control the outlet. The route through the St. Lawrence to Montreal, to Roule's Point, then down through Lake Champlain and the Hudson, appears to the United States members most feasible and this route is understood to have their sanction and the not very hearty endorsement of the Canadians.

TRAPPING CROWS.

It Is Not an Easy Matter to Set the Way.

Crows are trapped and sold to sportsmen for shooting matches, usually bringing $10 per 100, but, like other things, when scarce they bring more.

It is no simple matter to trap crows, for the crow is a wily bird, and to catch him in a net set for that purpose requires skill, and patience as well, but the hunter of the crow is always the trapper's greatest aid. One man alone would make but little headway catching crows and would probably sit all day in his little bough house, ready to spring his net, but the crow would give him a wide berth because they would know that he was there.

After placing the carcasses of some animal on a field the net is set close to it by bending poles of saplings, on which the net is hung flat to the ground, where they are held down by triggerlike pegs, and a line run 50 yards or more to a house built of boughs, where the trapper is seated.

Another carcass is usually laid some hundreds of yards distant on the same or another field, where there is no net set. The trappers, usually two in number, go into the bough house together before daylight, and when the crows begin to assemble on the field one of them goes out and walks away. The crows, seeing him leave, grow a little bolder and approach the bait in ones and twos, but stop only long enough to get a beakful of the flesh and fly off again.

What is done is to set a net of course the best patronized, but the trapper on the outside makes it his business to walk near enough to that to keep the crows from settling on it in numbers, and thus satisfy their hunger without going to the one where the net is. After awhile their hunger gets the better of their judgment or their fear, and they gather on the carcasses where the trapper is hidden, and the opportunity of the man in the bough house, who, with a vigorous pull on the line, springs the net over them. Quick work must be done then by the trappers, who rush up to the net, to keep the trapped crows from crawling out, and the end and the front, where it is not staked fast to the ground. With their hands covered with stout buckskin gloves, to keep the crows from biting and scratching them, the trappers pull the net in large ready to be carried off the field. From 40 to 60 are frequently caught at one pull, but it is a rare thing to get more than two springs of the net in one day.—Philadelphia Record.

A STORY OF LONGFELLOW.

Mrs. Fields Tells an Interesting Anecdote of the Author.

Speaking of Longfellow, in her volume of literary reminiscences, Mrs. Jane J. Fields says:

"His kindness and love of humor carried him through many a tedious interruption. He generously overlooked the fact of the interruption to which many of us women resorted in order to get an interview, and to help them out, made as much of their excuses as possible.

Speaking one day of the persons who came to see him at Nahant, he said: 'One man, a perfect stranger, came with an omnibus full of ladies. He descended, introduced himself; then, returning to the omnibus, took out all the ladies, one, two, three, four and five, with a little girl, and brought them in. I introduced them to the best of my ability, and they staid an hour. They had scarcely gone when a forlorn woman in black came up to me on the piazza and asked for a dipper of water. 'Certainly,' I replied, and went to fetch her a glass.

When I brought it, she said: 'There is another woman just by the fence who is tired and thirsty. I will carry this to her.' But she struck her head as she passed through the window and spilled the water on the piazza. 'Oh, what have I done!' she said. 'If I had a floor cloth, I would wipe it up.' 'Oh, no matter about the water,' I said, 'if you have not hurt yourself.' Then I went and brought more water for them both, and asked them on their way refreshed and rejoicing.

"It would be both an endless and unprofitable task to recall more of the curious experiences which popularity brought down upon him. There is a passage in the 'Mosses from a Manicure,' in which he describes an incident during Longfellow's last visit to England which should not be overlooked.

Upon his arrival the queen sent a graceful messenger to bid him to Windsor castle, where she received him with all the honors, but he told me no foreign tribute touched him deeper than the words of an English lord carrier who came up to the carriage to bid him farewell and asked permission to take the hand of the man who had written the 'Voices of the Night.'"

The End of Books.

What brings about the end of books? In this fire, water, or war. An every ship launched is bound to be wrecked, every temple to be burned, the final of the book is its reduction to ashes. What became of the Alexandria library? It is a question that has puzzled scholars for centuries.

This question asked: Was there any library at Alexandria containing 700,000 books? Gibbon inclines to the opinion that there was no such library.

Taylor justifies his opinion that there was a library it was burned in the time of Julius Caesar. Tradition seems to indicate, however, that there was a library in the Serapeum, by the temple of Serapis, but whether destroyed by Theophilus or Theodosius is not known. It looks as if the charge brought against the Arabs traced on no foundation. Recent explorations in the ruins of the city show no traces of the Serapeum. The seaport of Egypt was built on a damp foundation, and, granting that there was a library, it might have suffered from decay due to water. Books of too large taken to India, to the southern states and to the West India perils through mid-sea.—New York Times.

NOW IT IS GLAMING.

A LATE FAD OF THE GOOD HEALTH AND BEAUTY SEEKERS.

If You Will Get Enough Glance Into Your System, You Will Live to a Ripely Old Age—Description of the Treatment—A Professional Beauty's Confession.

Glamming is the latest occupation of women who devote themselves to the pursuit of health and beauty. Glance is a word which represents the chief object of these disciples of physical culture. These women seek it as to be glancing and are denominated glancers.

Not only are many maids and matrons of fashionable society occupied in glancing, but at least one of our professional beauty seekers has resorted to the process to lighten and preserve her charms.

Mrs. Martens, the professional beauty, confessed to a reporter that she had for some months been trying the principle of glancing on her own person, and obtained the most pleasant results from them. Daily she takes copious drafts of milk from the cow at a temperature of 88 degrees. She also inhales fresh air and sunshine at regular intervals. The treatment she follows is described in detail hereafter.

Mrs. Martens has appeared as a noted beauty in all the capitals of Europe, and received first prize in every contest she entered. The secret of her success is that she is said to have declared that she was first among stage beauties.

She is a woman of splendid figure, but her face is her principal charm. Her skin is smooth and soft and very fine. Her eyes are bright and dark brown and have much expression. She bears a strong resemblance to Mrs. Langtry at her best. For the preservation of all these charms Mrs. Martens declares that glancing is doing much.

What is done is to set a net of course the best patronized, but the trapper on the outside makes it his business to walk near enough to that to keep the crows from settling on it in numbers, and thus satisfy their hunger without going to the one where the net is. After awhile their hunger gets the better of their judgment or their fear, and they gather on the carcasses where the trapper is hidden, and the opportunity of the man in the bough house, who, with a vigorous pull on the line, springs the net over them. Quick work must be done then by the trappers, who rush up to the net, to keep the trapped crows from crawling out, and the end and the front, where it is not staked fast to the ground. With their hands covered with stout buckskin gloves, to keep the crows from biting and scratching them, the trappers pull the net in large ready to be carried off the field. From 40 to 60 are frequently caught at one pull, but it is a rare thing to get more than two springs of the net in one day.—Philadelphia Record.

Some of the essential rules of glancing may be briefly stated for the benefit of imitators. They are:

To inhale the lungs at regular intervals, and to take a drink of milk from the cow at a temperature of 88 degrees. To repose at regular periods during the day in which has recently been in motion. To have the skin kneaded daily with sweet oil.

Glamming, it is claimed, retards indolently wrinkles, gray hair and all the other signs of old age, beautifies the complexion, gives the eye wonderful powers of fascination, keeps the figure youthful and elastic and preserves the powers of the mind.

The aim of the glancer is to prevent the ossification produced by the deposit of calcareous or mineral matter in the blood. The deposit of this matter is the cause of old age. Physiologically one may become old at 80 as well as at 60.

The skin, lardens, wrinkles and gets old. The blood, which is the life of the body, does not circulate freely. The brain turns to bony substance in intricate parts and thinking becomes difficult.

To guard against this ossification it is necessary to prevent or dissolve the osseous deposits. One or two pints of distilled water daily are a grand remedy. The diet should include peas, grapes, oranges, juice, cherries, plums, peaches and berries.

An animal food, poultry and young mutton are recommended, because they contain less earthy salts than other meats. Phosphorus is necessary for the nourishment of the body, and this is to be found in lean meats, fish, cheese, whole wheat, oatmeal, almonds nuts, white cornmeal, beans, peas, and grapes.

It is to be kept in mind that to increase and strengthen the glance that is in her or him, and by exercise to draw in the precious fluid from natural sources, the chief of which is the milk of the cow.

Glance is the most mysterious of all principles and appears in many forms of life. It is the life of the body, and it is by the functions of life. The value of glance may be realized when it is understood that it imparts a buoyancy to the blood, and the vigor of youth, into the nature of even an old person.

Some physicians say that if a person is standing in a slaughter house near cattle and sheep, and that this is to be found in lean meats, fish, cheese, whole wheat, oatmeal, almonds nuts, white cornmeal, beans, peas, and grapes.

It has often been found that women of casual purchasers that small articles of Japanese manufacture, such as toothpicks and fans, could be sold at such low prices. The small fans are sold at a cent apiece, while the dainty little toothpicks command the same price per hundred.

When one examines either of these products and spends the amount of labor that must be spent to make them in any quantity, the natural inference is that the well known quality of the Japanese wares contains the explanation. At a first glance this seems to be the natural explanation. Such skilled workers as watchmakers get but a trifle more than $1 a week for their services, and the less skilled and more mechanical trades command a pittance that to our western ideas seems hardly worth the trouble.

But, small as the wages of the Japanese worker may be, there are conditions under which they are able to produce so much more than we can. There is a duty on the articles mentioned, and in addition to this it must be remembered that the Japanese worker is not paid by the piece, but by the quantity, and that, in the natural course, freights would give a considerable price in this market to articles that were entirely without cost in the Orient.

A visit to several Japanese importing houses which deal exclusively in fine Japanese goods, and other articles, and a comparison of the prices at which the small articles could be offered to the prices at which they are actually sold here, the large wages, which form the staple of the Japanese worker, and the long journey they come to grief, and there is where the mystery and the fact are only work their passage, but legally excuse duty. Packed in and around the wares are thousands of sheets of paper, and this use they lose their character as merchandise and become merely so much paper. It would be a great pity to see this material, and the enormous quantities of this material, which would be required for a single shipment of wares. The market here is constantly glutted with Japanese wares, and the same prices that are asked in Tokyo, and their wonderful quality of the wares, and the fact that they are sold at such low prices, and there is no such place, 'There, sir, is the port where my vessel cleared out.'

COLONIAL GRANDEUR.

Adelaide Scenes in the Early Days of Australasia.

The Rev. H. R. Howells in his book, "Travel and Talk," tells some amusing stories of the lives held at Government House, Adelaide.

In the early days of South Australia, the government of the period—a very early one—decreed that all who presented themselves at his court should wear a dress.

The number who aspired to the honor of presentation in those days was very small, and among them was but one who possessed a tall coat. The difficulty was not insurmountable, nevertheless.

The lucky owner of the coat went in, made his bow and came out and then hung the coveted possession on a tree in the next corner to array himself in. This process was naturally slow, and the governor grew impatient and inquired the reason of the delay.

It is said that the ludicrousness of the situation struck him at once. He burst out laughing and suspended the oppressive regulation until such time as the emperor should be sufficiently advanced to live more generally up to tall coats.

But what was her anger and disgust at seeing a third, and a fourth, and even a fifth car arrive, all at due intervals. She saw her way down in a terrible state of disappointment—just in time to see her own car, with her own driver, arrive with a sixth baby.

So far from having created a sensation, the car had been too popular, and her man had not been proof against the money offered him to allow other people to ride in it.

Only One Standard

You and we may differ as to money standards and out of our very differences good may come. But we won't differ as to the merits of one standard emulsion of cod-liver oil.

SCOTT'S EMULSION has won and held its way for nearly 25 years in the world of medicine until to-day it is almost as much the standard in all cases of lung trouble, and every condition of wasting whether in child or adult as quinine is in malarial fevers.

Differ on the money question if you will, but when it comes to a question of health, perhaps of life and death, get the standard.

Your druggist sells Scott's Emulsion. Two sizes, 50 cts. and $1.00.

Bacon doubtless had in his mind the propounder of unanswerable questions when, in his essay on "Discourse," he advised all men to abstain from knowledge, putting troublesome queries—a practice which he declared was fit only for a puer.

The power, however, has existed from the dawn of time, and it is to be found among all classes of men, from emperors down to private individuals who prepare scientific conundrums.

A somewhat early example of the power puer and simple was the Emperor Theodosius. The unfortunate philosopher who he used to keep for a pastime in his island retreat at Capri was continually being plagued by a host of questions.

A SUCCESSFUL RUPE.

Or Why One Woman Does Not Now Make Her Own Fate.

"Why don't women buy their hats as men do? Now, there is a dandy that only cost a couple of dollars and I will wear it for two seasons," and Chaucer Smith took off a most hat and handed it to his wife.

"That is your privilege," she responded. "Do you wish me to wear a hat like yours? It is a couple of dollars and I will wear it for two seasons."

"No, I mean a fashionable affair, with lace and ribbon; something that compares in value with yours. You let your milliners swamp you with their ideas and expend money. Be original and make your own hats and buy other things with the money saved."

"I am willing to try," said his wife pleasantly.

"That's right, Lottie. You know a man doesn't know anything about a woman's hat. It is the face under the hat that appeals to us," and lighting a cigar he swaggered off.

A day or two afterward business called Chaucer out on the avenue. He saw some pretty girls in the park, who were friends of his wife. They were pretty, but he knew they had always been outstayed. Lottie, and it gave him a pleasant thrill of satisfaction.

She saw a dowdy looking girl approaching, and he looked at her with a mental shock. "Why will women get themselves so dressed in such a frightful manner! I declare that poor thing would be passably good looking if she were stylishly dressed. Good heavens!" Lottie.

"I made it myself," said Lottie, as she shot past him, leaving him the picture of mortification and disgust.

"You see," she explained at supper that evening, "millinery is a profession I never learned, and I haven't millinery fingers naturally, as very few women have. But what is wrong with my hat?"

"It is simply frightful; that's all."

"I should think it came nearer being a nightmare."

So she did, said his wife decidedly. "A milliner studies the features of her customers and makes hats to suit them, and the effect is harmonious. My effort made a fright of me, and I can never improve. Making hats isn't my forte."

"Have one made tomorrow and send the bill to me. I hope you didn't see any of our friends on the avenue."

"Oh," said Lottie demurely, "none of them recognized me in that hat."—Detroit Free Press.

A "Cry of the Heart."

It was formerly the custom for young men who were making a beginning in literature to treat the living "old masters" in letters of great ventility, and in the winning some notoriety by publicly ridiculing them. When, therefore, they had an opportunity to express their honest city about it a decided pliancy.

It is related that in 1839 Chateaubriand, then held in very great honor, invited a group of literary people to his residence at Autun to hear him read his tragedy of "Atreus." Among the guests were Alexander Dumas and Prosper Merimee, two young men, who listened respectfully, who even after they left the house at midnight started back in the street and said they ventured to express an unfavorable judgment, but rode on in silence.

By and by they came to one of the great actors of the day, who actor had been required to "declare" or announce any articles that they may have in their possession which are subject to the municipal import duty. The agent in charge of the station stopped the cab in which the two young men were, thrust his head into the cab and said:

"Have you anything to declare, gentlemen?"

"Whereupon Soule exclaimed with much emphasis:

"I have to declare, and that most solemnly, that the 'Moses' of the illustrious Chateaubriand is a horrible bore!"

The control employee was speechless, and the two young men drove on, greatly relieved in their feelings.—Youth's Companion.

Uncle Sam's One-Jail.

How many people in the United States are aware that there is one United States penitentiary in all of the United States? Probably not 1 out of 1,000 of the population, except among those whose business it is to know such things. In every newspaper newswriter appear almost daily the names of prisoners in state penitentiaries, but the taxpayer never stops to inquire by what right the general government sends its prisoners to state prisons.

He never asks why it does not confine its prisoners in its own prisons. If he were curious enough to ask why he would have discovered that the government practically has no prisons of its own, except military prisons, which are not at the disposal of the civil authorities.

At Fort Leavenworth is the only prison which is a United States penitentiary, and it is made over from a military prison, which was originally a lot of quartermaster's warehouses, with a wall built around them. They will accommodate about 625 prisoners.—New York Sun.

Supremely Silly.

Such expressions as "Honorable people are always bright" are not only not necessarily true, but they are also, supremely silly. For what good do they conserve? When do they please? Who is the taffy as intended for his or her palate? It is pleasant to be thought bright, pleasant to be told that you are bright, but at the price of being considered silly. We don't know, do you?—Boston Transcript.

PLAGUE AND FAMINE.

THOUSANDS DYING DAILY IN AFFLICTED INDIA.

New York, Jan. 17.—Mr. B. W. Cham-berlain cables from London to the 'Sun': 'The death of the European world are turned this way toward India. Each day's intelligence from that stricken land makes it more apparent that the greatest tragedy in modern history is being enacted there under the double scourge of plague and famine.'

The death of Europe has been touched at last, and the entire sympathy, perhaps, more because it is a no-tinged with apprehension. It would not be surprising if within a month a similar plague pandemic should spread through Christendom. The globe powers have taken alarm. The news comes that Italy has summoned an international conference to meet forthwith at London to consider measures for dealing with the danger. There is little doubt that the response of the other governments would be immediate, and all other resources of modern science would be speedily arrayed against this hideous foe. Reliable information about the real extent of the plague in Bombay and its vicinity is lacking, and regarding the mortality it is only said, in general terms, that more than half of those attacked have succumbed by the end of the week. The new service of the London press is strangely inadequate, and it is from private sources that most of the news comes. The point which most interests Europe is whether the awful disease is likely to flourish in northern India, if the infection is introduced here; but no evidence is forthcoming as yet. It is argued by medical men, however, that if the plague is dangerous in Hong Kong, it would be equally so in India, and in London and Paris as far as climate is concerned. It is generally admitted that the plague is a slight disease, but there are certain peculiarities that spread.

Dr. Hank, the well known bacteriologist, who is investigating the subject in Bombay, states that the responsibility for carrying the infection upon rats, ants and other vermin and insects with which houses are infested, is a very serious one. They die and are eaten by ants, which carry the germs into the crevices of the buildings and water-taps and sinks. Thus the poison is diffused and cannot be eradicated except by fire.

This explains the efficacy of the old method of burning by fire, and, at the same time, the futility of isolating the sick as in other infectious diseases. The only thing to remove the healthy. It is reported in the 'Daily Mail' that large business houses in Bombay which are infested by rats have been rendered untenable and have been forced to vacate the buildings. It has not been reported that any larger animals are subject to the infection.

The French, Austrian and Italian governments have already taken stringent precautions against the importation of the plague, but it will hardly be possible to escape a series of alarms from this cause during the next few weeks.

The ravages of famine in the interior of India are still far more deadly than the more horrible mortality at Bombay. The victims of the plague are perishing by hundreds. The victims of hunger succumb by thousands daily. It would be easy to harrow the heart of every one possessing a spark of human sympathy by the accounts of the sickening sights, but surely the appetite for horror in all its forms has been satisfied there in the Christian era during the past few months. It is sufficient to say that the gaunt, starving millions of India are perishing at a more rapid rate than any army of soldiers could be exterminated by the engines of destruction devised by man.

The relief movements are now apparently in full operation. The public conscience and sympathy in this country have both been fully aroused. The response to the appeal is liberal, but utterly inadequate. The prospect of giving to suffering is scarcely more than one in a thousand. It will require the generosity of the whole world to oppose a real check to the ravages of hunger in India.

by a widow, four sons and two daughters.

The general opinion is that the recent Sabbath school convention at Melrose was one of the best township conventions ever held in Eastern Ontario. This speaks well for Tyendinaga and Deseronto. The committee relied chiefly on home talent and this, no doubt, tended to create more interest.

Warden Dench thinks the council should do something with reference to the administration of justice in the county, as he thought there were some irregularities.
Thus has been a long standing grievance in Hastings, with which no councillor hitherto appear to have had nerve sufficient to grapple.

The evidence given in the Melancthon arson cases is of a most sensational character. Several farmers have been committed for trial. Witnesses alleged that the prisoners deliberately burned barns, implements, horses, etc., all for the insurance money. And all this in Ontario.

Among the wardens elected on Tuesday are: J. L. Dench, of Sidney, for Hastings; Bowen E. Aylworth, of Bath, for Lennox & Addington; Parker R. Young, of Pictou; for Prince Edward; J. B. Saunders, of Athens, for Leeds and Grenville; J. M.
Tassart, of Bedford, for Frontenac; J. G.
Preston, of Manvers, for Durham and Northumberland; J. H. Melke, of Morrisburg, for Dundas, Stormont and Glengarry.

The C. P. R. express for Halifax to Montreal ran off the track on the line of the I. C. R. at Palmer's Pond, near Dorchester, N. B. on Tuesday. The engine kept the track but all the cars went tumbling over the 75 foot high bank.

A dreamer, of Bloomfield, N. B., and a G. Edgemoor, postal clerk, died from the injuries. A large number of passengers were cut or bruised, including Hon. Dr.
Jordan, Minister of Militia, who was cut about the head.

Prices of market produce remain

"The at home" given by the members of Craig lodge, A. F. & A. M., last evening was a most pleasant affair.

The concert at the West End Mission last Friday evening passed off well and a nice sum was realized for the good cause.

Robert Caldwell, a well known traveler for a Montreal drug house, was found dead in bed at Meaford yesterday morning.

A runaway horse attached to a sleigh came into the street and through the plate glass window of Sailer's shop the other morning.

A convict named Horrigan stabbed a fellow prisoner Macdonald in Kingston penitentiary the other day, using a table fork as a weapon.

At Dorchester, N. B., John Sullivan was found guilty of the murder of Mrs. Dutcher and her little boy and was sentenced to be hanged on March 12th.

Miss Florrie Bickford, of Dundas, a student of the law at the University of Toronto, was instantly killed while attempting to get on a train in motion.

A Brock Meredith, of Kingston, and Miss Gertrude E. Caracellan, eldest daughter of Craig T. Caracellan, of Richmond, were married at Selby on Wednesday.

Workshops at the Church of St. Vincent de Paul last Sunday found that the snow had not been removed from a long strip of boardwalk leading to the church.

A social under the auspices of Aberdeen lodge, No. 30, Daughters of Rebekah, will be held at the residence of Sister Mrs. G. A.

A despatch from Dorchester states that Hon. Dr. Borden is worse injured than at first thought and will be moved for a few days. He is injured about the neck and there is some fear his spine is hurt.

We are in receipt of a very daintily get up pamphlet from the Globe Publishing Company, of Toronto, giving an illustrated description of the office of the Globe. The whole is executed in a manner worthy of Canada's greatest journal.

The city council of Kingston neglected to keep the street crossings clear of snow and ice, and now the courts compel the city to pay $1,400 and costs, $3,000 in all, to Miss Drennon, who fell and sustained injuries as a result of this neglect.

At Auburn, N. Y., James McTague, a convict, was fatally burned in his cell by the explosion of some naphtha which he had secretly conveyed to his cell for cooking purposes. The guards could not get his finger unlocked in time to save him.

The local hockeyists have been enjoying a series of matches at the Citizens' Bank rink during the past week for the purpose of practice and combination play. This is a good idea for it is in hockey as in everything else practice makes perfect. Great improvement is already discernible and the coming match with Napane will see a stubborn contest. The Deseronto team will be selected from the best local players.

We are authorized to state that there is not one solitary word of truth in a statement to be found in the New York Times of
Jan. 22nd to the effect that the Rev. Dr.
Burton's New Sensation show has been sold by the artist's sale to pay the back salary of the performers. Mr. Burton considers this as the work of an enemy. He will be on the road next spring with a larger and better show than ever.

Tea Meeting at Gretna

The annual tea meeting of the Gretna congregation will be held on the evening of next Tuesday, Feb. 2nd. The Gretna people always give a cordial reception to their visitors and the event is one of the most enjoyable of the season. There should be a large attendance from Deseronto and the district generally.

Knitting and Crocheting

A new book, "Knitting and Crocheting," of 64 pages, over 50 original designs illustrated, beautiful lace patterns, shawls, sweaters, etc., is now on hand at the
"The Home," 141 Milk St., Boston, Mass., and will be sent with a subscription to that paper.

"The Home" is a 20-page monthly magazine devoted to the instruction of domestic topics and fashions. Its department of Fancy Work is a special feature, new and original designs each issue. The price of subscription is 50 cents per year and will include one of these books. As a special inducement to trial subscribers, a copy of this book will be given with a six months' subscription. The price of book is 25 cents, but a six months' subscription and the book combined will be sent for only 15 cents. The annual price for 1897 will be sent free on application.

Deseronto Horticultural Society.

The meeting of the Horticultural Society which was to be held on Thursday, Jan.
22nd, has been postponed until Tuesday,
Feb. 4th, at 7:30 p.m., in the Town Hall.
This will be quite an important meeting as the directors will decide on what plants, seeds and bulbs the society will purchase for its members this spring. All the directors and members should make a point of being present. The society will be instructed by the Horticultural Society of Ontario.
Fruit Growers' Association, with which it is affiliated, should make no time in going to the meeting, as the society will be free of charge for its members in both the Deseronto Horticultural Society and Ontario
Fruit Growers' Association is one dollar, and the Horticultural Society of Ontario

East Hastings Reformers.

The annual meeting of the East Hastings Reform Association will be held at the hall, Caniton, on Tuesday, Feb. 2nd at 7 p.m.

Locomotive Industry.

In 1896 there were built in the United States 1,175 locomotives, an increase of seventy four over 1895. Of these 309 were for foreign countries. South America came first, Russia next and Japan last. In 1895 only eighty were exported. For 1897 Japan has already placed orders for seventy.

Thurlow S. S. Convention.

A convention of the Sabbath School Workers of the Township of Thurlow will be held in the Methodist church, Caniton, on Friday, Feb. 5th, for the purpose of organizing Sabbath School Association work.
There will be afternoon and evening sessions commencing at 1:30 and 7:30 p.m. The committee have arranged an excellent programme for the occasion.

Tyendinaga Agricultural Society.

At the annual meeting of the Tyendinaga
Agricultural Society, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: M. Hill, president; S. Geddes, vice-president; A.
McFarlane, secretary; D. McLennan, treasurer; S. Kerr and W. J. Mayell, auditors; R. J. Garbutt, J. J. Sullivan,
B. Brown, Geo. Munroe, R. G. Martin, F.
Wash, and A. Pitman, A. Farnesworth, directors.

A Good Example.

At the meeting of Deseronto Council, No.
289, R. T. of T., the members unanimously voted the sum of five dollars for the relief of the famine sufferers in India. The amount has been placed in the hands of Mr. Taylor, manager of the Bank of Montreal, to be sent with other contributions to the National Relief fund.

This timely contribution of Deseronto, an example of the Templars will, no doubt, be followed by other organizations in town.

National Indian Relief Fund.

F. W. Taylor, manager of the local agency of the Bank of Montreal, has received notice from the head office to receive subscriptions to the National Indian relief fund, and to remit the same to the Governor-General free of charge. It is the object of this fund to unite all subscriptions in Canada in order to obtain a grant from the Government for the same. It is hoped that all citizens of Deseronto, who can possibly assist, will send in their subscriptions to help the suffering of their fellow subjects in India who are enduring all the horrors of protracted famine.

Tyendinaga Missionary Meeting.

The weather for the missionary meeting on Tuesday evening was very unfavorable.
No meeting was held at Christ Church, but a meeting of the Tyendinaga missionary meeting was held at the residence of the Rev. Mr. Dibb, of Odesa, and considering weather and roads, was as large as expected. The convener of the meeting, the Rev. Mr. Dean Card, was unable to be present, we regret to say,
through a serious attack of a gripe. The Rev. J. L. Fraser, locum tenens, said the prayers and delivered an excellent speaker who was known to the congregation, having served in the parish formerly as a lay-reader.

Death of P. S. Timmerman, Odessa.

Odessa lost one of its oldest and most respected citizens on Sunday in the person of Parker S. Timmerman, postmaster. He died at four o'clock aged eighty-three years and nine months. He had held the office of postmaster continuously since the fifth year of his residence in Odessa. He was appointed July 6th 1841, his commission being signed by Thomas Allen Steyer. He was a prominent liberal and Methodist, and was the oldest member of the Odessa church.
He was survived by several children among them being H. P. district superintendent of the C. R. S. T. John N.
B. J. S. and C. W. of Odesa.

Obituary.

Mrs. Timothy O'Leary, one of the first settlers of Tyendinaga, died on Thursday Jan. 21st, at Londale. Deceased was among those who in 1837 immigrated from Ireland to this country. After her marriage she settled down with her husband on the sixth concession near where St. Charles' church now stands. In 1870, with her husband and family, she removed to Londale where she died on Thursday Jan. 21st, at the age of 84 years. She was born in Londale with her daughter, Mrs. W.
F. McCullough. Up to within two days of her death she had no symptoms of illness. But old age was at work, and she peacefully passed away. Her remains were taken to the cemetery, and thence to the R. C. cemetery, at Markham, where she was buried beside the remains of her husband. She leaves a family of five children, John and Jan, of Hastings;
Mrs. W. F. McCullough, Londale; Mrs.
McGuinness and Mrs. McGillion, of Chicago.

Basket Social.

The members of Deseronto Council, No.
289, Royal Templars, sat in open council on Tuesday evening, for the purpose of enjoying the delicious refreshments of the members of the council, a large company of visitors were present and all enjoyed a very pleasant evening. The Rev. Mr. Sel-lenger, of the Methodist church, presided.
Councillor, presided and directed a programme, which, though largely improvised on the spot, proved bright and attractive.
There were several choruses by the council,
reading, and recitations by Alice and Annie Brown, S. Warden G. F. Huff, who proved
a great success in his humorous ballad
trio by Miss Chamberlain and Messrs.
Verden and Huff; instrumental selections
by Alvin Farahan and Earl Parks, and addressed by the Chairmen, S. Hall and Russell. The regular programme over, Bro.
William Stuart was installed as auctioneer, and there were several choruses by the council, and recitations by Alice and Annie Brown, S. Warden G. F. Huff, who proved
a great success in his humorous ballad
trio by Miss Chamberlain and Messrs.
Verden and Huff; instrumental selections
by Alvin Farahan and Earl Parks, and

The Queen's Birthday.

This being the year in which the Queen's long reign will be celebrated all over her vast empire, all the towns are already taking steps to mark the happy anniversary. We presume that the great number of celebrations will be held on Dominion Day, and that the celebration of the Queen's Birthday will be held on Friday at Deseronto have decided to hold a demonstration on the 24th of May with a concert and a large crowd. They have appointed committees and are making the necessary arrangements to assure a first class celebration. They will no doubt be well supported in this effort by all classes of the community.

The Weather.

We have had our share of the weather during the past week. The eight inches of snow which fell on Thursday last week was supplemented, to 5 below, Monday and Saturday, on which day there were several snow buries. Sunday clear and cold the mercury falling to 5 below. Monday morning was bitterly cold, the thermometer indicating 17 below zero with a cutting wind. It moderated rapidly toward evening, but has been fair and weather since with frequent flurries of snow.
The cold wave of Sunday and Monday remains in the air, and the mercury in many places being 30 to 40 below.
Much suffering in the large cities followed.

Fatal Accident on the O. A. & P. S. Railway.

A freight train was wrecked on the Ottawa, Arnprior & Parry Sound railway on Thursday evening, 21st inst., resulting in the death of three train hands—C.
McIntosh, aged 26, single; James Casselman, brakeman, aged 45, married; Wm.
Russell, in charge of store car, aged 35, married. One man was injured, William McIntosh, aged 35, married. The accident occurred at O'Brien's crossing, four miles above Barry's Bay.
An open switch is said to have been the cause. In the siding were two cars, and into these the engine dashed and was thrown into the ditch, several of the cars
in the long train taking the same course.
All the victims belonged to Ottawa.

Deseronto, Oct. 30th, 1896.

IT CANNOT BE.

The dying lips of a dear friend
At parting spoke to me,
Saying: "Wherever your path may tread Thereover I shall be."

"We walk where over Egypt's sand
The burning simoom blows,
Or in Alaska's sunless land,
Your life my life shall know."

"When winter's nights are long and dark
I'll lead you by the hand,
And when the waves break on your bark
Will beacon you to land."

Re-died. I watched his spirit go Across death's darkening sea,
And he came back and now I know
Of things that cannot be.

PLACE NAMES.

Some Odd and Curious Names of Places
in Massachusetts.

In the Middlesex field some good old colonial names are preserved, like Jingleberry hill and Shillibilly brook. Spot pond was named by Governor Winthrop, who discovered it in the winter, because of the many rocks that showed through the ice and spotted the surface. Powderhorn hill in Chelsea is said to have been bought from the Indians for a hornful of powder.

The fact of misfortune to divers unknown persons—whether trivial or great does not appear—finds a record in Bad Luck brook and swamp in Rehoboth, Bad Luck mountain in Granville and Bad Luck pond in Douglas. There may be some association between Burncoat brook and pond in Leicester and Spooner and Burnshirt river, likewise in Worcester county.

Drunkwater river is a felicitous name for a stream of good water. It is in Hanover, and possibly there have been a family of that name in the neighborhood. Strong Water brook in Townsbury has quite different associations. Sought for pond, in Westford, suggests a long and baffled quest for the spot through the wilderness in the olden days. One of the least euphonious of names is Skug river in Essex and Middlesex counties. It is worthy a place among such English names as Wormwood Scrubs, a park in London.

The legend about the names of the group of islands on the south coast presents an instance of how fancied resemblances give rise to stories. It is related that these islands once belonged to a man with four daughters. To Nance, the oldest, the father gave the first choice, and the fact that "Nantuck" is recorded in the name of Nantucket, the island she selected. Nantucket, of course, is in reality an Indian name. Martha's Vineyard and the Elizabeth islands went to Martha and Elizabeth, respectively, while for the fourth daughter, whose name has been lost to memory, there was nothing left but the most remote and undesirable of the group, which was called No Man's Land, because its owner was a woman. The Elizabeth islands, in fact, were named for Queen Elizabeth by Bartholomew Gosnold, their discoverer, whose name has been given to the town that comprises them.—Boston Transcript.

Mailing Candy Abroad.

A young man who recently knows a girl in London came into the office the other day and asked whether candy could be sent abroad through the mails. He was taken over to the postoffice and the state of affairs was laid before an official, who designated an investigation. After a long time he returned and reported as follows:

"I am very glad," said he, "that you asked that question. Its answer shows a curious state of affairs. In this country you can send candy up to 4 pounds as merchandise for 1 cent for each ounce. If you want to send candy abroad you only have to pay 1 cent for every 2 ounces, but you can only send 12 ounces in each package. If it weighs more than 12 ounces you have to pay letter rates, or 10 cents an ounce for the whole thing."

"That is to say, you can send 10 ounces to London for 6 cents, but it would cost you 10 cents to send it to Brooklyn. So if you are thinking of sending a pound it will cost you $1.60. The stamp department is right over there."

"Thank you very much," said the young man. "I just happen to remember that the doctor has forbidden the girl to eat candy."—New York Mail and Express.

Foiled.

Senator Wilson of Washington and his brother, Harry Wilson, look very much alike. One day in Spokane, where the two brothers live, Senator Wilson, who had just returned from his legislative duties, was stopped on the street by a man who had known him for years.

"Harry," said the man, "when will your brother John be home?"

"In a day or two," said John with-out a smile.

"Tell him I want to see him on an important matter."

"Certainly," said John.

"And you will not forget it?"

"I'll try not," promised John, and thus another office seeker was foiled.—Washington Post.

Mrs. Hearst's Motive.

Mrs. Phoebe Hearst of California has given $200,000 to found a mining school in connection with the state university at Berkeley as a memorial to her husband. She gives largely to the free kindergartens, supports several college endowments and contributed $1,000 to the recent campaign for the woman suffrage amendment. She has also given $300,000 to establish a fine gymnasium for girls at the state university. She said to Miss Anthony, "I am doing all this to make girls fit to vote."

A PITIABLE PEOPLE.

French Laborers Spend Nearly All Their Wages For Alcohol.

A good deal of superficial claptrap is repeated year after year by writers about the remarkable sobriety of the Latin races generally and of the French people in particular. The Italians certainly seem to be as abstemious as they are hard working, but as for the French they are declared by the most eminent medical authorities to be undergoing a rapid process of degeneration, brought on by the reckless consumption of brain paralyzing, blood poisoning liquors.

Dr. Brunon, the well known director of the medical school at Rouen, and a student of his, Dr. Fouché, have just published the results of their studies on the subject, and these are eminently calculated to alarm French patriots. The latter gentleman dressed himself up as a waiter and obtained a place in a tavern in Rouen frequented by the lowest class of workmen, many of whom sleep there for a penny a night. The guests of this most infamous place were the principal objects of M. Fouché's investigations, and he says that these pitiable people, who earn about fourpence an hour, came regularly, drank their beer in a few minutes, went back to earn more by the most laborious work, and then took to drinking the proceeds of it in like manner till day was on into night and consciousness was almost lost to intoxication. Sometimes he saw 150 glasses of the most pernicious alcohol served out in the short space of ten minutes.

Dr. Brunon bitterly complains of the enormous number of little taverns of this type and mentions one street in Rouen containing 150 houses, of which 75 are licensed to sell poisonous beverages.—Chicago Chronicle.

THE ADDER'S STING.

Solomon Spoke Truth When He Admonished Against Wine.

Solomon was a wise man and wrote a great many wise thoughts, but he never wrote a clearer or more forcible truth than is found in the book of Proverbs xx, i, "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whoever is deceived thereby is not wise. And yet, the light of this wisdom, we see much of foolishness and deception."

I admit that there is a period in the drink habit when conviviality seems to hold sway, when companionship is sought, and the individual is praised for his generosity and independence of restraint. He is regarded as a man in whose veins there is no puritanic blood, one who believes in having a good time. But Solomon wrote another thing about strong drink, and the individual is praised for his generosity and independence of restraint. He is regarded as a man in whose veins there is no puritanic blood, one who believes in having a good time. But Solomon wrote another thing about strong drink, and the individual is praised for his generosity and independence of restraint. He is regarded as a man in whose veins there is no puritanic blood, one who believes in having a good time.

Persons are often deceived into believing that they can drink or let it alone. There is a time when this may be true; but, consenting to drink and not let it alone, there comes a time when a man can no more let it alone than he can resist the current of the mighty river—a time when the endearments of home, the endearments of loved ones, the attractions of wealth and honor, are powerless to resist the progress of a vitiated appetite or turn him back toward the untold horrors of a drunkard's life, a drunkard's death and a drunkard's hopeless eternity.—Rev. R. E. Smith, D. D.

DRINKS COME HIGH.

London's Expenditure For Alcoholic Liquors This Year Is About $100,000,000.

The most recent temperance statistics published in London show that the annual consumption of liquor in that capital is largely on the increase. It is estimated that the sum of £20,000,000, or $100,000,000, will be spent this year in alcoholic drinks by the dwellers in the metropolis. This sum, it is computed, will nearly double the next year for the school board maintenance, added to the cost of necessary new school buildings.

The appropriations for the relief of the poor in London are about $18,000,000, which is only one-fifth of the present drink bill. The London debt of about $96,000,000 could be paid in one year by the amount spent on liquor and a balance of nearly $4,000,000 left over.

When it is taken into consideration that liquor is much cheaper in London than here, the enormous quantity consumed is largely in excess of what it at first appears to be.

The Gun Goes Off

Instantly when you pull the trigger. So sickness may come on suddenly. But it takes time to load the gun, and it takes time to get ready for those explosions called diseases. Coughs, colds, any "attack," whatever the subject be, often means preceding weakness and poor blood. Are you getting thin? Is your appetite poor? Are you losing that snap, energy and vigor that make "clear-headedness"? Do one thing: build up your whole system with SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod-liver Oil. It is the essence of nourishment. It does not nauseate, does not trouble the stomach. And it replaces all that disease robs you of.

FRANKED FOR THEM.

A SOLDIER'S STORY OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN AND BOYS IN BLUE.

An Envelope That Is More Valuable Than the Best Stamp in Any Collection—The Soldier Who Wouldn't Tell Lincoln a Lie.

"Let this go, A. Lincoln." Unless it has been destroyed there is in a home in Fond du Lac county, Wis., a soldier letter in an envelope bearing the above words, signed by the great war president.

Frank King was a Laminator boy, fresh from the farm, and a character our whole country took to kindly from the first.

When the army was camped in Virginia, near Washington, the winter of 1861-2, it was a common practice with the soldiers when they got a pass to visit the city and buy a package of envelopes and call at the capitol, send in for their senator or representative and get him to frank them.

One of our boys came back to camp in high feather. He had two packages of envelopes—one franked by Senator James R. Doolittle, one a Chicago lawyer, the other by the late Senator T. O. Howe, who succeeded Captain James as postmaster general in President Arthur's cabinet. For 20 years senators and members have been giving a good deal of thought to helping the soldiers with their pension claims. If they have done it as willingly and pleasantly as they used to frank envelopes for the boys, they must be pretty nearly angels.

"You fellows, there, are making a big blast over getting a couple of senators to frank your envelopes," said Frank King. "Just you wait till you see me come back from Washington with the president's name on some letter or other."

Within a few days Frank King and Harry Dunn, who for years after the war was a Chicago business man, went to the city. They called at the White House. It was easier to see the president then than it is now. At certain hours of the day a soldier could reach the chief executive with fully as much ease as a senator can in these later years.

King was the ring-leader. Approaching the guard, he said: "We want to see Mr. Lincoln. Please stand aside and let us pass."

"Who are you, and what is your business?"

"I've told old Abe we have charge of a regiment over on Arlington Heights and want to see him on an important matter. He'll let us in."

"Where are your shoulder straps?"

"We came over in our everyday clothes. Come, we are in a hurry. Let us go in and see Mr. Lincoln."

The parley had attracted the attention of the president. The door swung open and the good natured chief of the nation smiled upon the two Chicago fellows and bade them step right in.

"What can I do for you, my men?"

"Mr. Lincoln, I want you to frank these envelopes," said King.

"Better get your congressman to do that."

"I'd much rather have you do it, Mr. Lincoln. The folks at home would like to see your name on my letters."

"I'll fix one of them. Take the rest to your congressman. Who is he?"

"I don't know."

"Where is your home?"

"Laminator, Fond du Lac county, Wis."

"That is my friend Scott Sloan's district. You give him Sloan. He will fix the rest of them."

The president shook hands with the two privates, asked them to be brave soldiers and wished them a safe return to their sweet homes in Illinois. Frank King couldn't make his tentmates believe that the president had written: "Let this go, A. Lincoln." But the next day he wrote a letter to his father. The name of Lincoln was personally examined by all of the neighbors.

In January, 1864, our regiment was in Washington on the way home, having re-enlisted—"veteranized," as they called it. In company with two others I went to the White House. The president shook hands with us, thanked us for swearing in for three years more and expressed the hope that we would have a nice visit on our veteran furlough.

"Mr. President," said Jones—Ed Jones—"you franked a letter for one of the boys in our company, Frank King. I wish you would frank one for me."

"Odd as it may seem, you are the second soldier to make such a request. So both are of the same company? Very well."

On Jones' envelope he wrote "A. Lincoln, President," and as he handed it back he asked what had become of that other man who had asked him to pass a letter.

"He was killed at Gettysburg."

I shall never forget the look of sadness in the president's face when the answer was given, and it had not disappeared when we left the room.

"Jones, what did you tell him about King? Did you see how it pained him?"

"What did he ask about him for? Do you suppose I was going to lie to a man I would die for?" was Jones' indignant reply.—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Court's Decision.

"You remember howforth, who married the woman who kept house for him so long?"

"Yes."

"Well, the court granted her a divorce last week."

"Alimony?"

"Not in cash. The decision was that she could keep the house."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The drug clerk had a unique customer the other day—a man from the county, as his appearance indicated. He came in with a prescription of the "gunshot" variety, that is to say, it called for about ten different ingredients. The clerk proceeded to fill the prescription, and was watched closely by the customer. Finally the clerk noticed that the man was becoming agitated, and concluded that he was in a hurry. "I'll be through in a few minutes," said the clerk to pacify the man.

"I ain't in a hurry. But say, young fellow, I don't like the gettin' old medicine."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, them bottles you got there are only half full. You're givin' me your old stock."

It required a good deal of explanation on the clerk's part to convince his customer that the medicine was "fresh."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Moments With Dictionaries.

Many an interesting hour may be spent in the company of a good dictionary. It should tell you that kings were in the earlier times known as "fathers of families," while queen meant at first "wife" or "mother." An earl was an "elder," pope was the same as "papa" and car and kaiser both meant "Caesar." Lord is the Anglo-Saxon bluford, meaning "loaf distributor." "Huzzay" was once a respectable household word, "pagan" was simply a boy, and "catfish" meant a captive. From the name of the laborer on the villa of an old time Roman gentleman we get the name "villain." A "pagan" was originally a countryman, while "varlet" is the same word as "valet." Our students should study their dictionaries a little more closely than the majority do.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

In the Dominion of Canada there are about 40,000 militia. The permanent military forces consist of about 1,000—artillery, infantry and cavalry.

The first city incorporated in this country with a charter and privileges was New York, which was granted its papers in 1664.

All Seasons for Its Own.

"Ice is an awfully ruinous thing," said Cholly. "In winter whole towns are bankrupted by ice gorges, and in the summer the young men are bankrupted by ice cream gorges."—Chicago Tribune.
